JAPS THREATEN CHINA; DEMAND 'WAR MOVES' END

Also Insist Jehol Must Be Given Up.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

TOKIO, Jan. 21 (Saturday).—Japan issued a stern warning to China today. It came in the speech of Count Yasaya Uchida, foreign minister, who appeared before the opening session of parliament.

Citing Marshal Chang Hsueh-liang's movement of Chinese troops to the Chinese province of Jehol and the alleged action of the Nanking central executive committee in directing military operations along the Great Wall and in fostering an anti-Japanese boycott, the foreign minister declared:

"Chinese troops have invaded the province of Jehol. The Japanese government cannot look upon such a state of affairs in China without the gravest apprehension. We are compelled to warn the government and people of China against unfortunate eventualities that may arise from the situation and to invite them to think seriously before proceeding further in that direction."

Claims Jehol for Manchukuo.

Reviewing the establishment of Manchukuo (Manchuria) as an independent state and Japan's responsibility to lend aid to Manchukuo, as agreed in the protocol of Sept. 15, 1932, Count Uchida declared:

"With reference to Jehol, viewed historically, there is no room for doubt as to the fact that the Great Wall marks the boundary separating China from Manchuria and Mongolia. It is evident that the province of Jehol constitutes an integral part of the new state."

Regarding the Lytton committee's report on Manchuria, Japan's view is "that the peace of the far east can be secured only by recognizing Manchukuo," Uchida said.

He expressed the opinion that the league of nations should "allow elasticity with questions relating to China in view of the exceptional and abnormal conditions of that country." The covenant could not be applied otherwise without damaging the prestige of the league, he said.

A Veiled Warning to Russia.

Russia has cooperated in maintaining "an attitude so cautious that nothing unpleasant has occurred to mar its relations with Japan," Uchida said. "There are those who fear whether the recent restoration of diplomatic relations between the U. S. S. R. and China might not add vigor to the communist propaganda throughout the orient. This is not the occasion for me to pass judgment upon this sort of opinion.

"However, should the Red movement in the Yangtze valley and South China, which have long suffered from the activities of the communists and the depredations of the communist armies, gain in strength as a result of the Sino-Russian rapprochement, that would be a serious menace to peace in the orient, against which Japan must certainly be on guard."

MYSTERY MOVE IN CHINA

BY JOHN POWELL.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

TIENTSIN, China, Jan. 20.—Considerable excitement was created in political circles here tonight as a result of the sudden departure of Tuan Chi-jui, former premier and leader of the powerful Anfu military clique, for Nanking and Shanghai. His announced purpose is to visit his daughter, but Chinese newspapers declare his real purpose is to confer with Marshal Chiang Kai-shek, dictator of China, and assure the national government of the loyalty of the conservative northern political factions, which heretofore have been under suspicion of supporting Japan.

Other rumors are in circulation that Tuan has been sent to Nanking in behalf of the Japanese and is carrying alleged peace terms for a settlement of the Manchurian question.

Since Tuan's party was ousted from the Peking government, Tuan has been residing in the Japanese concession at Tientsin, closely guarded. He was visited recently by a number of Japanese emissaries, including Gen. Uyematsu, director of the general affairs department of the Tokio general staff.

Japs Open Drive.

Headquarters of the Chinese general, Yu Hsueh-chung, governor of Chihli province, announced today that the Japanese have started an extensive drive in Jehol province.

MYERS RESIGNS; ACT TO REDUCE PAY IN SCHOOLS

Board Surprised by President's Move.

Developments yesterday in the campaign to rescue the local governments from the tax muddle were:

FIRST—The Sargent committee selling tax warrants to pay salaries of governmental employes reported initial subscriptions of $5,500,000. Page 5.

Lewis E. Myers announced his resignation as president and member of the board of education last night. The announcement came as a surprise at the end of a three hour conference at which the school trustees tentatively agreed to cut the salaries of teachers and other employés 10 per cent of the amounts they receive above an exemption of $1,000 in order to balance the 1933 budget.

Press of business was the reason for his decision, Mr. Myers asserted. His resignation, which is contained in a letter to Mayor Cermak, will take effect after the adoption of the school budget, about Feb. 1.

Mayor to Name Four Trustees.

When the mayor names Mr. Myers' successor he will have five appointees on the board, one short of a majority. Eleven trustees make up the school board. In May, however, the mayor will gain control of the board through the appointment of three additional trustees. The terms of Trustees H. Wallace Caldwell, James A. Hemingway, and John A. English, appointees of a former mayor, will expire at that time.

The mayor's present appointees on the school board are Orville J. Taylor, Robert F. Carr, Ernst Buehler, and Mrs. W. S. Hefferan. Although he is a holdover trustee, William D. McJunkin has been voting with the Cermak members for the last few months.

Mayor Cermak declined to comment on Mr. Myers' resignation. It was recalled, however, that when the mayor took office the holdover trustees refused to leave the board. Since that time there have been blistering statements against this group released by Mayor Cermak and replies in kind from Mr. Myers and his associates.

Bitterness Persists.

Although Mr. Myers has been consistently an advocate of economy in school finances, one of Mayor Cermak's demands, it is said that the personal bitterness between the two persists.

Mr. Myers became a member of the school board in September of 1929 and is serving his third term as president. The president is elected by his fellow trustees, and until an election is held Mr. Hemingway, as vice president, will preside over the meetings after the president's resignation takes effect.

Mr. Myers denied that politics, health, or any other considerations were factors in his decision to leave the board. "I feel that I have done my share," he declared, "and business duties make it impossible for me to remain on the board any longer." Mr. Myers has been in the general building and construction business for more than thirty years.

Reveal Pay Cut Proposal.

It was revealed after the secret conference of trustees and department heads that methods of cutting salaries to balance the budget appropriations on stated resources of $69,442,424 had been debated. The appropriations now sought are $3,000,000 more than the stated resources, which include more than $8,000,000 in "paper" surplus, consisting of uncollected taxes. How much of this "paper" surplus will be permitted to remain as resources is undetermined.

Joseph P. Savage was the trustee who suggested that $1,000 on each employé's salary be exempt.

"It looks as though the minimum slash on the salaries above $1,000 will be 10 per cent," asserted Mr. Savage. "On this basis the employé getting $1,500 will lose $50, or 10 per cent of the $500 above the exemption, and similarly the man or woman with a salary of $5,000 will be cut $400."

"We are in striking distance of balancing this budget," said Mr. Myers. "The lower salaried employes will be exempted according to this plan, because they are not receiving any more than they should in order to live. I'll

BOMB EXPLODES IN THE MIDST OF CROWD; 12 HURT

SEVILLE, Spain, Jan. 20. — (AP) — Twelve persons, including a woman and four children, were injured tonight by the explosion of a bomb at Socialist headquarters. Police found another unexploded bomb weighing 25 pounds in the building. Two persons were arrested and a roundup of all anarchists was ordered.

The blast occurred at the door of the headquarters when two men, armed with pistols, tried to stop a crowd of Socialists from entering to attend a scheduled meeting.

When the Socialists attempted to capture the men, the pair fled, dropping the bombs as they ran. One bomb rolled into the street in the middle of a large crowd. The two men escaped.

Scotti Weeps as Long Opera Career Closes

New York, Jan. 20.—(AP)—A lamp flickered on a dirty San Francisco street. Dusk settled into darkness.

A man stole into the shadows.

Another writhed on the cobblestones, gasped, died.

This was the villainous Chim-Fen, from an opium den. He died as he had killed others—by the hatchet.

Thus did Antonio Scotti pass today from grand opera.

Curtain. . . . lights.

Like waves tossed high by the storm, an ovation swelled over the Metropolitan—reaching its peak of intensity as the great baritone stood alone, fenced in by flowers, on the stage that knew him as the compeer of opera's kings and queens.

Thousands of hands thundered plaudits. As many handkerchiefs waved, from orchestra pit to gallery. Women in the "Golden Horseshoe" stood and cheered. The conductor, Bellezza, broke his baton in the excitement.

Breaks Into Song.

In the front row a man burst into song. It was Lawrence Tibbett. Scotti had helped him up to operatic heights.

The words rolled out:

"For he's a jolly good fellow . . ."

The audience joined in. "For he's a jolly good fellow."

Tears trickled down Scotti's face, streaking through the grease paint. His smile was wistful, his hand trembling as he waved the crowd into a semblance of silence. Then his farewell:

"You have made my heart full. God bless you all"—the voice faltered—"Good-by."

The crowd wouldn't leave. So Scotti left them, still cheering him as he walked off the stage into retirement.

The day's opera was "The Oracle," a tragedy of San Francisco's Chinatown. No one but Scotti has sung the rôle of Chim-Fen at the Metropolitan, and it may never be sung again.

Famed Soprano Feeble.

In the dressing room, that has been Scotti's home in his thirty-three years at the Metropolitan, the famous of opera gathered.

Morris Gest, the producer, broke through, pushing before him an aging, bent little woman. There came cries of "Sembrich, Sembrich."

It was in 1899 that Scotti made his debut at the Metropolitan as Don Juan, and with him that night was Marcella Sembrich.

The famed soprano is feeble now. She can't see well.

She thought another was Scotti. But Scotti hastened to her side. She kissed him, cried out:

"Ah, Scotti, you're an artist, always. You couldn't have been better than today, any time."

The baritone cupped her chin in his hands, bent close, saying: "Dear lady, I've never sung as well since you left."

Geraldine Farrar burst in the packed dressing room. She rushed into Scotti's outstretched arms as the onlookers applauded. These two were together at the "Met" for many seasons. Farrar retired not long after Caruso died. Gone, too, is Louise Homer from the Metropolitan.

Now Scotti goes—first to his beloved Naples, his birthplace. He'll be 67 next week. He's going to idle through the rest of his life.

As he walked from the stage a bulky figure loomed from the darkness of a corner. It was Gatti-Casazza, the impresario. In his 45 years in opera he's seen the best come and go. Today it was Scotti.

BENJ. FRANKLIN, IT SEEMS, OWES ALL TO THE LITTLE WOMAN

New York, Jan. 20.—(AP)—Mrs. Benjamin Franklin finally got her full share of credit tonight.

In a national thrift week talk Mrs. Lida Foote Tarr, national president of the Camp Fire Girls, said:

"Before Franklin's wedding bells rang out he never had saved any money, never succeeded in any enterprise, never brought order into his affairs, and never lived a regular life. When he married . . . he changed his habits. . . .

"No better wife could be found for a young man on the make. She made all his linen and woolen clothing by hand. She tended the shop, helped make ink with lamp black, and traded in goose feathers. He never tired of praising her thrifty virtues to his friends.

"So let's give Mrs. Benjamin Franklin due credit."

Judges Take Away Sheriff's 100 Policemen

Sheriff William D. Meyering will lose his force of 100 highway policemen April 1 under an order unanimously approved by the judges of the Circuit court last night. The abolition of the force was voted as an economy measure under the statutory power of the judges to fix the number of employes in county fee offices.

In addition to abolishing the 100 highway police jobs the judges reduced the number of jobs in the 12 fee offices from 1,641, the 1932 total, to 1,559. The report of the judges is to be sent to the county board to guide the commissioners in preparation of the 1933 budget. The commissioners are bound by the judges' report, as it is entered as a formal order of the court.

State Force Increased.

Under the order the highway policemen are to be carried on the county pay roll only for the first four months of the fiscal year, which began last Dec. 1. No further provision was made for the force after April 1, the judges said, because the state highway police force in the county has been increased from six men to eighty, and because Gov. Horner is contemplating the creation of a metropolitan police force.

The judges decided the sheriff's force would merely duplicate work of the other departments, but reserved the right to reinstate a portion of the sheriff's force if the state force is reduced or if no provision is made for a metropolitan force.

During the meeting of the judges in executive session a further argument was advanced against the highway police, it was reported. Several judges declared Sheriff Meyering has failed to function as the chief police officer of the county, since he has failed to conduct an active campaign against crime.

Calls Action Unreasonable.

Sheriff Meyering declared the action of the judges to be "unreasonable and unsound." He predicted a storm of disapproval will come from the areas policed by the highway force.

A table showing the twelve fee offices, the number of employés in 1932, the number asked by the officials for 1933, and the number allowed for 1933 by the judges, follows:

	1933 jobs.	1933 requests.	1933 jobs allowed.
Circuit court	76	68	68
County court	31	31	30
Superior court	62	66	62
Probate court	65	60	60
Criminal court	48	42	42
Sheriff	646	690	*639
Juvenile court	144	140	140
Treasurer	172	171	171
Coroner	44	48	45
Recorder	314	264	264
Jury commissioners	13	13	13
Adult probation	26	25	25
Totals	1,641	1,618	1,559

*The figures on the sheriff's office are exclusive of the highway police.

The Circuit judges adopted the report of its help committee, with the exception of its recommendation to allow the highway police. Members of the committee are Chief Justice Philip J. Finnegan and Judges Philip L. Sullivan and George Fred Rush.

SNOW PLOWS TRY TO RESCUE FIFTY IN CALIFORNIA

Los Angeles, Cal., Jan. 20.—(AP)—Snow plows were being driven under full power tonight in an endeavor to cut into a region of the high Sierra in Mono county where fifty motorists were trapped by high drifts under a raging blizzard.

The victims included a mother with a baby two weeks old and other small children. They were being cared for in the cabins of the few winter residents of the section. Food supplies, however, were reported low.

Over the lowlands of southern California, weather violence which made this one of the stormiest weeks of recent history apparently was at an end. Rainfall dwindled and the sun made a brief appearance over Los Angeles late today.

ROOSEVELT AND HOOVER CONFER; EARLY HEARING

London Diplomacy Again Is Victor.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.

(Pictures on Back Page)

Washington, D. C., Jan. 20.—[Special.]—Following the White House meeting today in which President Elect Roosevelt committed himself to discussion of reduction of the British war debt due the United States with a British mission immediately after March 4, the Hoover administration lost no time in starting the ball rolling.

Secretary of State Henry L. Stimson summoned Sir Ronald Lindsay, the British ambassador, and transmitted to him a formal invitation to the British government to send a mission to Washington. This was an official response to a communication from the British government stating that it would like to send such a mission to open negotiations on reduction of the British debt.

Will Prepare for Conference.

Between now and March 4 the state department will make arrangements, amass data and otherwise prepare for the conference. At the instance of the President elect, his economic advisers, Profs. Raymond Moley and Rex Tugwell, remained behind after Mr. Roosevelt's departure and went to the state department, where they began collaborations with the department economists. Mr. Stimson was of the opinion that the agreement reached with Mr. Roosevelt today had saved six weeks in getting the negotiations under way.

The outcome of the White House conference was a signal victory for British diplomacy.

The British not only succeeded at last in committing the President elect to a discussion of debt revision, but succeeding in linking debt reduction with the world economic conference which is to be held in the spring. The agreement to which Mr. Roosevelt acceded in a meeting with President Hoover foreshadows the course the British government contemplates pursuing to win the new President's support of a scaling down of the four billion dollar British debt.

Consents to Joining Issues.

The United States consented to participate in the world economic conference on condition that revision of the war debts would not be included in its scope. Mr. Roosevelt, however, consented to discuss with the British mission not only the war debt but world economic problems. He is known to expect great things of the world economic conference in the way of promotion of the tariff, exchange and other economic reforms he has in view.

It now appears that the British intend to take the position that nothing will come of the world economic conference unless the United States agrees to scale down the war debts. Mr. Roosevelt is to be told in effect that if he wants to achieve his economic program he will have to consent to reduction.

The White House conference at which the agreement was reached lasted an hour and a half. Attending President Hoover were Secretary of State Henry L. Stimson and Secretary of the Treasury Ogden L. Mills. Accompanying Mr. Roosevelt were Norman H. Davis, who figured prominently in bringing about the meeting, and Prof. Moley, Roosevelt economic expert.

Statement Is Issued.

At the close of the conference the White House issued the following statement:

"The conference between the President and the President elect this morning was attended by Secretaries Stimson and Mills and Messrs. Norman Davis and Moley. The discussions were devoted mainly to a canvass of the foreign situation and the following statement covering the procedure to be followed was agreed upon:

"'The British government has asked for a discussion of the debts. The incoming administration will be glad to receive their representative early in March for this purpose. It is, of course, necessary to discuss at the same time the world economic problems in which the United States and Great Britain are mutually interested and therefore that representatives should also be sent to discuss ways and means for improving the world situation.'

"It was settled that these arrangements will be taken up by the secretary of state with the British government."

Great pressure was brought to bear upon the President elect to designate members of a commission which President Hoover would appoint at once to begin negotiations with the British. This was the one point on which Mr. Roosevelt refused to budge. He adhered stubbornly to the position he took in his previous meeting with Mr. Hoover that he would exercise no authority until he assumes office.

Tall, raw boned Sir Ronald Lindsay, the British ambassador, beamed satisfaction with the outcome of the White House meeting, but would say nothing for publication. The capital woke up to the fact today that he had performed one of those feats for which his government is wont to confer a peerage.

It was Lindsay who pulled the wires behind the scenes setting in motion all manner of influences to commit Mr. Roosevelt to discussion of debt reduction. Working in close cooperation with the British ambassador were President Hoover, Secretary Stimson and Mr. Davis, long time associate of the house of Morgan, British fiscal agents in America.

Effect on French Discussed.

There is much speculation here on the effect of the British coup upon the course of France regarding the debts. The British paid their December debt installment, and the events of today pointedly emphasized that a debtor who pays can get a hearing on debt reduction. The result is a certain isolation of France, who, though amply able, refused to pay.

France came in for severe criticism in the senate today at the hands of Senator Arthur Robinson [Rep., Ind.], who recently favorably reported the Johnson bill to prohibit private loans to defaulting debtor countries.

"France, together with some smaller countries, largely under her influence, has recently given an exhibition of ingratitude that shocked the world," Senator Robinson said. "In the most flagrant manner she repudiated her obligation to the United States and treated it as a scrap of paper; this notwithstanding the fact that in time of her utmost peril America saved her life and then furnished the money for her economic rehabilitation.

Admitted Capacity to Pay.

"A man who refuses to pay his honest debts is without standing, esteem or respect in the community. France, and other defaulters, have placed themselves in this category in world opinion.

"Indeed, the behavior of France is far worse than that of any other nation, for she freely admitted her capacity to pay, and at the same moment when she violated her obligation to the United States had the audacity to extend credit to Austria in a sum practically as great as the installment due the United States which she had refused to pay."

The senator attacked debt cancellationists in this country, particularly the international bankers, "who are apparently far more interested in European welfare than that of our own people." He hoped his colleagues would pass the Johnson resolution. He pointed out that after defaulting on her payment France had authorized the construction of a cruiser to cost six millions more than the amount of the payment.

Predicts Regrets by France.

"If France would think more of peace, less of war, cut down her enormous armaments, and exhibit the strength of character which nations are expected to possess," said Senator Robinson, "she could pay her honest obligations to the American people and never miss the money involved."

DAUGHTER LOSES SUIT TO BREAK L. H. BRINK WILL

Circuit Judge Joseph Burke yesterday halted an effort to break the will of Louis H. Brink, producer broker, a co-founder of the Chicago Poultry board, who left an estate of $1,250,000, and directed a jury to return a verdict for Brink's three sons. His daughter, Mrs. Jesse Brink Long, 529 North Grove avenue, Oak Park, sued to break the will, charging that her father was not in possession of his faculties when his will was executed.

The judge's directions were given after the evidence of Mrs. Long and her brothers, John L. Brink, 7925 Washington boulevard, River Forest; Ernest C. Brink, 533 North Grove avenue, Oak Park, and Laurence H. Brink, 529 North Grove avenue, Oak Park, had been placed on record. Judge Burke said there was no evidence to prove Brink had been influenced or was incompetent when his will was drawn.

The will placed Brink's property in trust until the death of his widow, Mrs. Ida Brink, who will receive the income under the supervision of her sons, the executors. At her death the property will be divided into four parts, one of which will be kept in trust for Mrs. Long, the income to be given to her at the discretion of her brothers. The principal will be given to her children at her death.

HOOVER'S ENVOY IS NEW ADVISER OF ROOSEVELT

Norman Davis Joins His Official Party.

BY JOHN BOETTIGER.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

En Route with Roosevelt, Washington to Muscle Shoals, Jan. 20.—[Special.]—Out of today's conference at the White House has loomed a new economic adviser to the President elect.

Norman H. Davis, who is regarded by many as an apostle of Wall street and the international bankers, is riding southward tonight with President Elect Roosevelt, and Prof. Raymond Moley, who advised Mr. Roosevelt since long before he began his campaign for the presidency, is left behind. Mr. Moley has shown an attitude of liberalism and some have thought him of radical tendencies.

Both men accompanied Mr. Roosevelt into his conference with President Hoover this morning, at which an accord was reached on allowing England to proceed at once for the presentation to Mr. Roosevelt, immediately after his inauguration, of England's plea for revising her debt to the United States.

Slated for Important Job.

But Norman Davis, who, although a Democrat, has been the Hoover delegate to the world economic conference, has been noted taking the lead in sitting with the President elect here the last few days. In some quarters he is taken as the likeliest candidate for Roosevelt's secretary of state, but others consider it more likely he will be sent to the court of St. James as the American ambassador.

Mr. Roosevelt had denied on several previous occasions that Mr. Davis would accompany him into the conference with Mr. Hoover, and this afternoon he declared he had made up his mind only this morning. As to the significance of Mr. Davis being on this train, it was asserted that the diplomat was bound for a visit to members of his family in Tennessee.

Also at Mr. Roosevelt's side since he left New York City, and on other occasions recently, was William H. Woodin, president of the American Car and Foundry company, who with Bernard Baruch holds the distinction of being the two chief "big business" supporters of the Roosevelt campaign.

Encouragement to Debtors.

Observers commenting on the statement issued by the White House today after the Hoover-Roosevelt conference pointed out that its significance is little more than a reiteration of a statement made two months ago by Gov. Roosevelt when, after his first conversation with Mr. Hoover, he said he believed a debtor nation should always have access to the creditor nation.

Upon this assurance, it was pointed out, England might make all preparations for the presentation of her facts to the incoming administration. In this light today's White House statement was considered to be largely an effort to give some assurance to financial interests and to interests in England that Mr. Roosevelt would willingly receive the British application.

Mr. Roosevelt, aboard his special train after leaving Washington, declined to discuss openly his conference with President Hoover, but he expressed an opinion that it would speed up the settlement of the British debt by a full month.

Speeds Up Consideration.

The President elect, southward bound for a visit to the government power and nitrate plant at Muscle Shoals and then for a rest at Warm Springs, Ga., and a cruise at sea, pointed out that Great Britain could not gather her facts, appoint a commission, and have them across the Atlantic without an assurance that they would be received. If this were delayed until after he became President the matter could not be heard by the administration until after April 1, in the President elect's opinion.

Questioned about whether the other debtor nations who have stressed their inability to pay would receive the same consideration, Mr. Roosevelt indicated this had not been discussed. As to France, who failed to make her Dec. 15 payment, although in possession of the gold to do so, Mr. Roosevelt is inclined to accept France's definition of having "deferred" payment rather than having "defaulted," it was learned.

Dozen Congressmen Aboard.

A dozen congressmen are aboard the President elect's special and will accompany Mr. Roosevelt on his inspection of the Muscle Shoals development. After dining at Montgomery, Ala., tomorrow night with Gov. McAllister, Mr. Roosevelt will proceed to Warm Springs for a two weeks' rest.

The President elect declined to comment on the antics of Senator Huey P. Long of Louisiana, who had given the impression, in a hilarious interview last night, that Mr. Roosevelt supported his filibustering tactics.

"I heard about that party you had in the hall," Mr. Roosevelt said, laughing, referring to Senator Long's vociferous orations to the newspapermen outside Mr. Roosevelt's hotel suite.

OPPOSE FEDERAL RESTAURANT IN NEW POSTOFFICE

Unfair competition with private business was charged against the federal government last night by members of the American Restaurant association of Chicago, who met to protest against establishment of a government operated restaurant in the new federal postoffice. The meeting was held in the Capitol building, State and Randolph streets.

By a unanimous vote those present passed a resolution to register a formal protest with Postmaster General Walter F. Brown and with Senator Elect William H. Dieterich of Beardstown, who has represented the association in the past. The restaurant men want the eating places around the new building to get the luncheon trade of the employes.

Gust Terzakes is president of the restaurant men's association and John Patras is secretary.

GEORGE MOORE, FAMOUS IRISH NOVELIST, DIES

Death Takes Noted Author at 80.

LONDON, Jan. 21 [Saturday].—(AP)—George Moore, the famous Irish novelist, died at 6 a. m. today. He would have been 81 years old next month.

One of the most discussed writers of the last generation, Moore was credited with introducing the modern English novel with its frankness and realism of detail. For that he was made the target of bitter abuse and suffered the attacks for 30 years. That was one of the reasons that impelled him to issue his novels privately and at such high price.

"This persecution has gone on long enough," he said. "It has made my life miserable. I have determined that for the future I shall be master in my own house. After all, it is not for people who know nothing about literature to decide whether 'Esther Waters' is a fit book to be given to a young girl or not."

Educated in Paris.

Moore was born at Ballyglass, County Mayo, Ireland, Feb. 24, 1852, the son of George Henry Moore, a member of parliament. Instead of an Oxford or Cambridge education, which might have been his, he went to Paris, where he frequented the cafés with Manet and Degas.

His education he imbibed from the picture galleries and talking to the learned men of his day. From these associations he became imbued with a desire to paint great pictures, but when he found this impossible he turned to writing great books.

At the outset he turned to poetry and it was not until 1885 that he published his first novel, "Mummer's Wife." Critics of that time assailed the book as full of deliberate realism, powerful, but repulsive. His "Esther Waters," issued in 1894, also met with many attacks from people who thought it too bold.

Book Arouses Storm.

The product of Moore's pen appeared with regularity until 1916, when "The Brook Kerith," a romantic life of Christ, was the signal for another storm of attack. Lord Alfred Douglas applied for a process against the author under the blasphemy laws, but it was denied.

Since 1918, when "Avowals" appeared, Moore published all his work privately. Among the books so issued were "A Story Teller's Holiday," "Abelard and Heloise," "In Single Strictness," "Ulick and Soracha." "A Story Teller's Holiday" was banned by the United States as obscene. Recently it was discovered that the ban had been lifted on the basis that it was "of established literary merit."

One of the best known of Moore's works is his "Confessions of a Young Man," written in 1888, an autobiography of his earlier years.

Moore formerly devoted some time to drama. He interested himself in the Irish Gaelic revival and was one of the founders of the Irish Literary theater. His first play, "The Strike at Arlingford," 1893, was written after an eminent critic declared that Moore was incapable of writing a play. Other plays included "The Bending of the Bough," and "Diarmuid and Grania."

BRITISH PLEASED BY U. S. 'BID' TO DISCUSS DEBTS

London Confident Parley Will "Bear Fruit."

BY EUGENE SPECK.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Jan. 20.—The announcement that a British debts mission has an invitation to proceed to the United States early in March to discuss war debts and international economic problems with the incoming administration of Franklin D. Roosevelt was received in official circles here tonight with considerable satisfaction.

Prime Minister MacDonald, who is spending the week-end at his country place at Chequers, was immediately informed of the gist of the Roosevelt-Hoover conference statement. A similar notification was sent to Chancellor of the Exchequer Neville Chamberlain at his country home near Birmingham.

Official notification of the American decision to discuss war debts with the British has not yet reached London, but it is certain to receive the attention of the ministers at Monday's cabinet meeting.

Expects "Fruitful Results."

Meanwhile, the British government is confident that the discussion will bear fruitful results, not only before June 15, when the next debt installment is due, but before the middle of April, when this year's budget will be presented to parliament.

It can be assumed that the British government will accept the invitation to send a mission to Washington to discuss the subject. The personnel of this mission and the instructions to be given it probably will be some of the first things to come before the cabinet.

The Roosevelt-Hoover statement reached London too late for a general and extended editorial reference by the majority of the London morning newspapers, but all news stories on it carried prominent headlines. The Daily Telegraph and the Liberal News-Chronicle were among the few dealing editorially with the subject.

Calls It a Step Forward.

The News-Chronicle regards the Washington announcement as "highly important.

"So far as it goes, it is a very welcome and promising step forward on the road to a real settlement," the newspaper says. "It represents a very great advance on any former position taken up in this manner by America and it is certain Great Britain will not be backward in earnestly supporting any plan which offers a fair chance of world settlement, nor lacking at all in full recognition of the courage and public spirit shown by the American statesmen who have taken this initiative."

The Telegraph heads its editorial: "America's Dubious Advance." Referring to Washington's suggestion that British representatives "also should be sent to discuss ways and means for improving the world situation," the Telegraph says this "represents a real advance from America's official position hitherto stubbornly held that the war debts conference is purely an independent problem only distantly connected with the world economic problem and not exercising a very powerful influence upon it.

"We read Washington's communique as indicating that the United States is not disposed to let go its hold on the British war debt until they have made a satisfactory bargain with Great Britain in other directions."

British Apprehensive.

After declaring the main hope of the world economic conference lies on all around acceptance of general formulae for removal of trade barriers, the editorial proceeds:

"So the question arises whether this conference will not be fatally prejudiced if the United States enters it holding fast to their war debt claims unless they have come to separate preferential bargains with their debtors, which presumably would make application of world formulae impossible. Unless, therefore, the British economic representatives are invited for purely informative purposes preparatory to the world conference, the Washington communique may excite as many apprehensions as it allays."

France "Slightly Satisfied."

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, Jan. 20.—The statement issued in Washington, D. C., that President Hoover and President Elect Roosevelt had agreed upon war debt discussions with Great Britain shortly after the change in administration was received here with a slight degree of satisfaction.

Official quarters expressed no disappointment that there was no mention of France in this communique. It is the attitude here that in the long run the entire debt problem would be clarified by the Anglo-American negotiations.

Before the Washington statement was issued a foreign office spokesman said France was ready to negotiate with the United States in case Mr. Hoover and Mr. Roosevelt chose to reopen the question before the date of the inauguration on March 4.

Step in Right Way.

ROME, Jan. 20.—(AP)—The American decision to discuss the debts with Great Britain aroused the comment in circles close to the government that it was a step in the right way. It was welcomed especially as indicating the treatment Italy might expect.

When the Italian government decided to pay the debt interest due Dec. 15 it announced it would solicit reexamination of the matter prior to June, when a principal payment is due. Premier Mussolini's policy has been consistantly in favor of cancellation of both debts and reparations, but failing this he has indicated he will insist on reconsideration of Italy's debt in the light of the nation's capacity to pay.

UNION'S CHIEF, KIN OF BARKER, IS SHOT BY GANG

Machine gunners tried last night to assassinate Danny Cain, 32 years old, president of the Chicago Coal Teamsters' union and brother-in-law of George [Red] Barker, who was shot and killed last June. The hoodlums wounded Cain twice in the left hand.

Cain had just left a west side club and was driving to his home at 5848 North Whipple street when at Franklin boulevard and Central Park avenue several men in a car drew alongside of him. He suspected their purpose and dropped to the floor of his car, keeping his left hand on the wheel. This act saved his life. A burst of machine gun bullets rattled through the left side, hitting his hand twice and riddling the car.

The would-be killers sped away and Cain drove to a north side bowling alley club, where he found Dr. J. Gould Barker, a brother-in-law. The latter took him to the Martha Washington hospital. Attorney W. W. Smith was summoned and he persuaded the police not to remove Cain to the Bridewell hospital. No information was given out by the attorney or Cain's relatives. Police said that Cain was pushed into the teamsters' union presidency by "Red" Barker several years ago and that the shooting probably originated in dissension over this fact.

FREED AFTER MURDER QUIZ.

Harold Sawyer, 23 years old, 514 Addison street, who was arrested for questioning in connection with the murder of Policeman Albert G. Magoon, in a beer flat on Dec. 13, was freed yesterday when arraigned in the South State street court on a charge of disorderly conduct.

AIR LINES UNITE TO OPPOSE TAX ON AVIATION GAS

The four largest air lines operating out of Chicago have united in an effort to defeat the proposal of the Illinois aeronautics commission to tax aviation gasoline for the benefit of private pilots in the state, contending that the air lines will pay 75 per cent of the tax and receive virtually no direct benefits. The revenues from the tax would amount to about $79,000 a year.

The lines which will oppose the aviation gasoline tax before the legislature are United Air Lines, American Airways, Northwest Airways, and Transcontinental and Western Air Lines, all of which transport air mail, passengers and express. The aviation gasoline tax was first attacked by S. M. Singleton, executive secretary of the Citizens' association.

The attitude of officials of the air lines was that under the plan to tax aviation gasoline the work of the Illinois aeronautics commission would be borne by the air lines, which already pay full taxes as an industry, while the air lines would not benefit.

U. S. O. K.'s Year Delay in Start of State Street Bridge

The war department yesterday granted the city an extension until Jan. 28, 1934, of the time in which the city must begin construction of a new bridge across the river at State street, and until 1936 for completion of the structure, according to a dispatch from Washington. The city asked for the extension because the State street subway has been delayed, it having been planned to construct the bridge and the river section of the subway at the same time.

TWO GUN GANGS BATTLE POLICE IN LOOP; TWO SHOT

Policeman and Robber Are Wounded.

A policeman and a robber were wounded and the lives of dozens of homeward bound loop workers were endangered at the rush hour yesterday afternoon by shootings connected with two downtown holdups.

At 823 West Jackson boulevard a trio of bandits, seeking to hold up the Market Loan company office on the ninth floor, fired on Policeman Maurice Marcusson. He returned the fire before he fell, shot in the abdomen and the right wrist, and one of the three men was struck in the groin and captured.

Battle in Wabash Avenue.

The second shooting occurred north of Lake street in Wabash avenue. Machine gun bullets fired from the entrance to an alley on the east side of the street clipped through the motor traffic and over the heads of pedestrians to crash through the windows of the New Paramount barber shop at 212 North Wabash avenue.

In the street, cruising slowly southward, was a Yellow cab driven by Olaf Peterson, 2047 North Spaulding avenue. At least a dozen of the bullets struck the top of the cab and passed on. In the barber shop were Frank Kudo, owner; three other barbers, a porter, and a lone customer, Francis J. Cummings of 1411 Hyde Park boulevard, who was having a hair cut.

The bullets were all high and the window was broken at a height of about eight feet, twenty-three lead pellets burying themselves in the wall.

Policeman Tells Story.

Traffic Policeman Thomas Sloan stationed at Lake street and Wabash avenue, gave the most coherent story of the shooting. He said that he had been informed there was a holdup in the Drive Smoke shop, 210 North Wabash avenue, which has been raided twice recently as a gambling resort and ran to investigate.

Four men, the policeman continued, ran across the street and turned into the alley, which is just north of the barber shop. One of them then turned and fired the bullets which did the damage. Two of the four apparently got away in a car and the others fled on foot east to the lower level of Michigan avenue. Sloan followed and shot three times at the foot fugitives, who escaped.

The unofficial report of the holdup in the smoke shop was denied by Harry Russell, one of the owners.

The shooting of Policeman Marcusson occurred in a hallway on the ninth floor of the Jackson Boulevard building. He is connected with the police bureau of identification. Off duty, he had gone to the loan company office to assist Harry Fischer, manager of the concern, to guard money being paid in by borrowers.

As they were talking a colored porter, Polexaphan Irving, stepped in and told him that three men whose actions appeared to indicate they were bandits were in a washroom at the end of the hall. Marcusson, drawing his pistol, stepped out and was met by bullets from the pistols of two of the trio.

Firing back, he struck his man. Both policeman and gunman fell, but the companions of the robber, one of whom was standing at the elevator shaft, assisted him into an elevator.

Fleeing from the building, they were seen by Policeman Daniel Tenney. When he commanded them to halt the wounded man was deserted by his friends, who fled in an automobile. Tenney seized the deserted man, who said he was Anthony Rocco, 24 years old, 2531 Flournoy street.

Marcusson was taken to the Iroquois hospital and then to St. Luke's hospital, where his condition was described as critical.

Seize Former Undertaker in Killing of Sweetheart

Alexander Hoffman, a former undertaker under suspicion in connection with the murder on Jan. 2 of his sweetheart, Mrs. Wanda Slawinski, 28 years old, 1217 North Paulina street, was in custody yesterday. The death was at first considered a suicide. Mrs. Slawinski was found in the kitchen of her home, her throat slashed. Hoffman was suspected as the result of testimony given at the coroner's inquest on Wednesday by the slain woman's daughter, Olga, 10 years old, who said Hoffman was with her mother the night she was killed. Hoffman was ordered apprehended and held to the grand jury.

POLICE CAPTAIN HURT BY MOB AT RELIEF STATION

Supervising Police Captain John Horan was struck over the head with a baseball bat yesterday when a mob tried to storm a relief station at 2836 West North avenue. He returned to the scene after surgeons took four stitches in the wound. Agitators and communists had arranged for "demonstrations" at four stations where food and clothing are rationed to idle families, but only at the North avenue station was there any disorder.

Capt. Horan and fifty policemen were stationed in Humboldt park, across the street from the relief station, which is in charge of Miss Lucy Blair. The mob surged upon the police, using as weapons the sticks on which they carried banners saying: "We want cash instead of paper," and "We demand removal of police from relief stations." Plans to classify and finger print the idle who are receiving aid was said to have prompted the outburst.

The police dispersed the mob after one man had been pushed through a drug store window. He was slightly cut. At the police station he gave his name as Max Grozinski, 636 North Rockwell street. A number of others were arrested.

Mayor Cermak, when notified of the fight last night, said that most of those arrested at relief stations are imported trouble makers, and urged that steps be taken to keep them out of the city.

INFLATION BRINGS SHAKEUP IN NEW ZEALAND CABINET

WELLINGTON, New Zealand, Jan. 20.—(AP)—Differences in the cabinet over the government's inflationary policies led today to a reorganization of the ministry.

Prime Minister Forbes took over the office of attorney general in addition to portfolios he already held as minister of railways, external affairs, scientific and industrial research, public trust, and head of the electoral and high commissioner's department.

J. G. Coates becomes minister of finance, giving up the ministries of transport, public works, and unemployment. Adam Hamilton, postmaster general, becomes also minister of unemployment and J. A. Young, minister of health immigration, takes over the portfolio of internal affairs.

Commodity prices, stock market prices, and transportation rates have risen since yesterday's order boosting the exchange rate of the New Zealand pound to 125 to 100 British pounds.

16 YEAR OLD BOY CONVICTED OF DRY LAW VIOLATIONS

Peoria, Ill., Jan. 20.—[Special.]—A 16 year old boy, the youngest prohibition law defendant to appear in United States District court, was found guilty of possession of liquor found in his father's South Adams street speakeasy. The boy, Robert Evans, son of "Red" Evans, one of the gang convicted of kidnaping Dr. James W. Parker, was placed on probation for a year by Judge Charles G. Briggle.

22 SAVED FROM SINKING VESSEL LASHED BY GALE

U. S. Steamship Rescuer; 4 Swept Overboard.

New York, Jan. 20.—[Special.]—In a howling wind and dangerous seas, the American liner American Merchant saved 22 members of the crew of the British freighter Exeter City in mid-Atlantic today, and left the broken little vessel foundering in the storm lashed seas.

The Exeter City's captain, the third officer, an apprentice and a seaman were lost before the American Merchant reached its side when a giant wave carried away the bridge and most of the ship's superstructure.

Commanded by Capt. Giles Stedman, who figured in another famous sea rescue, the American cargo-passenger vessel stood by the Exeter City for hours and finally effected a thrilling rescue despite a turbulent sea and hurricane winds.

Battle Against Time.

Time and again the rescuers were baffled by the elements, and then, as the Exeter City was sinking rapidly, a desperate means of rescue was employed with success.

"Ship abandoned, sinking rapidly," Capt. Stedman reported laconically to his office here after the rescue, and apparently continued on his course to New York.

The detailed story of the wreck of the Exeter City, which was owned by the Bristol City Line of Steamships, Ltd., and the subsequent rescue, was reconstructed here.

The Exeter City was bound for Portland, Me., Boston and this city when the terrific storm caught it 1,500 miles east of New York and tore away its superstructure in one fierce blow.

Skipper Swept Into Sea.

Capt. E. D. Legg hadn't a chance to save his ship or himself. In the first blow the sea sent the ship's bridge, the captain's quarters, the dining saloon and the captain himself swirling into the water, sweeping the little vessel clean to its low main deck.

Capt. Legg's third officer, and two others, one of whom was probably at the wheel, were caught in the tremendous weight of water and died with their master.

Shortly afterward the American Merchant, fifteen miles away and bound for New York, picked up the frantic wireless call for aid.

This was at 10:30 a. m. at the position of the freighter and 5:30 in New York. The Mackay Radio company intercepted the message and rebroadcast it.

Ship's Lifeboats Gone.

"Vessel in distress, hatches stove in, lifeboats gone," read the message which also gave the position of the ship.

Two hours later a message was picked up from the Exeter City's wireless, a brief, wistful report saying "American Merchant has not yet arrived."

At 12:20 p. m. the American Merchant drew near the Exeter City, and while his crew was preparing lifeboats and line carrying guns for the rescue Capt. Stedman sent a message telling of the wallowing ship's plight in the terrific storm raging.

For three hours Capt. Stedman maneuvered his ship around the floundering freighter, amid scattered wreckage from her superstructure, fighting against time to get a lifeboat down in the high seas. Then he reported:

"Exeter City reports sinking rapidly. Am alongside. High seas. Using line-carrying gun."

Shipping men explained that this was a gun used to shoot a line across the intervening distance.

Two hours later, when the sea was growing dark, Capt. Stedman was still using this gun, and finally managed to get a line across to the Exeter City.

"Shot line aboard Exeter City," he reported, "towed lifeboat. Endeavoring get crew aboard for last hour."

22 Men Finally Safe.

Forty-three minutes later the 22 men were safe on the American Merchant after a perilous but short trip between the lost ship and the sound decks of the rescuer.

Late tonight a final laconic message from Capt. Stedman told more of the rescue story.

"Weather conditions were unfavorable for rescue and we were standing by, waiting improvement, when Exeter City reported sinking rapidly and immediate assistance necessary. We shot a line aboard and blanketed sea with oil and launched lifeboat. This was hauled alongside Exeter City, one end of the line retained aboard here. The Exeter City crew debarked, hauled alongside the American Merchant with considerable difficulty. The Exeter City crew displayed greatest courage and stamina, all thoroughly exhausted."

Capt. Stedman, as chief officer of the liner President Harding, directed the rescue of twenty-eight men from the Italian freighter Ignazio Florio just before it sank in mid-Atlantic Oct. 21, 1925. Both the Italian and American governments awarded him medals.

TELLS U. S. JUDGE HE'S 'BURNED UP' AND MEANS IT

Attorney Jay J. McCarthy created a sensation in the court of Federal Judge Charles E. Woodward yesterday when, in the midst of a legal argument, he paused and said dramatically:

"I am all burned up; I am afire."

Then hastily the attorney dashed out of the courtroom with Deputy Marshal Michael Centanno in pursuit. A few minutes later Mr. McCarthy returned and explained.

"I apologize to the court and to the assistant district attorney," he said. "But I had several boxes of matches in my coat pocket and they became ignited when I brushed against a chair. With the help of the deputy marshal the flames were extinguished." The attorney was defending a youth charged with impersonating a prohibition agent.

WOODRING, LAST OF 3 STUNT ACES OF ARMY, KILLED

Mail Flyer Also Dies in Georgia Crash.

Dayton, O., Jan. 20.—[Special.]—Lieut. I. A. Woodring, considered one of the outstanding flyers of the army air corps, was killed at Wright field here today while testing an experimental plane of the attack type. The engine exploded, tearing the plane to bits. It was believed Lieut. Woodring was killed in the air. He was 31 years old and the last of the "Three Musketeers" of the air corps.

Lieut. Woodring had completed tests of the plane at a height of 2,000 feet and was returning to Wright field. The explosion threw his body clear of the wreckage. His parachute was unopened.

Second Death in 8 Days.

The crash was the second fatal accident at Wright field in the last eight days. Last Friday Capt. Hugh Elmendorf was killed when an experimental plane crashed.

Other members of the "Three Musketeers" of the air corps, so called because of their daring and ability to maneuver planes, were Lieut. W. L. Cornelius, killed in 1928, and Lieut. J. J. Williams, killed a month later when his plane crashed head-on into one piloted by Lieut. Woodring, who saved his life by using a parachute.

Outstanding among the aviation exploits of Lieut. Woodring was his flight through extremely bad weather in October, 1930, from Vancouver, B. C., to Newark, N. J., in record time, carrying documents from the Japanese government ratifying the London naval treaty. In recognition of this flight congress awarded Woodring the congressional medal of honor.

Lieut. Woodring was Col. Charles Lindbergh's escort when the latter toured the country in 1926 and was later a member of the 95th pursuit squadron on the west coast. At Wright field he was a member of the unit which performs the most dangerous flying of the army service in testing new planes and equipment.

Mail Flyer Killed.

Marietta, Ga., Jan. 20.—[Special.]—An American Airways mail plane bound for Atlanta from St. Louis crashed into the side of Little Kennesaw mountain, near here, today, killing the pilot, Glenn T. Fields. He was burned in the wreckage of the plane. A heavy fog was believed to have caused the crash.

American Airways officials came here from Atlanta and identified the plane and the pilot's body. Fields had been reported two hours overdue at Atlanta and his wife and baby daughter were waiting at the airport there when news of his death was reported.

HOME LOYALTY GETS NO REWARD FOR STATESMEN

Nepotism List Depleted by Recent Election.

BY WESTBROOK PEGLER.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 20.—[Special.]—The fine old family custom among the statesmen of installing their sisters and their cousins and aunts on the government pay rolls has come in for some complaint by destructive critics during the last few months.

There was a time up to last year when 37 of the senators and 133 representatives took care of their own in this manner, but there occurred a campaign of innuendo which has now seriously embarrassed the domestic virtue of providing for one's loved ones. It began when Mr. Raymond Clapper of the United Press, a journalist devoid of human kindness, noticed the names of the loved ones in government positions and, out of sheer orneriness, made a canvass to see just how many there were and how much money they were drawing for how little work.

A Laborer of Unkindness.

Mr. Clapper devoted much time to this labor of unkindness and persisted in the face of the fact that it was causing great anguish among the sisters and the cousins and aunts of the statesmen and also among their aged fathers and their sons. This was characteristic of him, as any one would have known who had seen his actions when he was in Dayton, Tenn., during the celebrated battle of the fundamentalists. A decent, respectable baboon was brought into Dayton as an unwilling witness for the defense and it was Mr. Clapper's pleasure to go down to the vacant store where the baboon was quartered and plague it day after day.

Mr. Clapper would pay his dime and go inside and when the room was well crowded with neighbors down from the hills he would give the baboon a poke with a twig and whisper, "Well, I see the family has come to call on you."

This would make the baboon wild and it would shake the bars of the cage and scream indignant denials. It was strictly in character for such a man to go poring over the government records in Washington, causing anguish for the statesmen's loved ones.

Not Easy to Trace.

At that, he was not satisfied, as he believes he must have missed some in-laws who could not be detected by any similarity of names. If the sister of a congressman's wife marries a man by the name of Dokes and the congressman's own name is Smith it is almost impossible to discover the relationship unless somebody tells, and, of course, the loved ones were not telling.

Among the loved ones who were drawing pay at that time was Mr. Tully Garner, a son of the Vice President elect. Young Mr. Garner was performing valuable government work at his home town of Uvalde, Tex., for a salary of $91.66 per month.

Inasmuch as Uvalde, Tex., is some distance removed from Washington, D. C., it was not apparent how he could commute to the office in time for work every day, but it developed that Tully Garner had a branch capital, or Little Washington, of his own in Uvalde in which to perform his valuable work for his $91.66 per month.

Publication Ordered.

There came a resolution calling for the publication of the government pay rolls on the ground that they were public documents. This naturally was resisted on the ground that they were private family affairs of the statesmen, and it was also argued that their publication would cause great personal sorrow and would be therefore contrary to the purposes of the government. However, the resolution carried and, by one of those coincidences that will not happen more than once in a million times, Tully Garner happened to quit his public position in Little Washington, Tex., the day before the resolution was adopted, which was very good timing, anyway.

Up to that time each member was allowed $5,000 a year for clerk hire, with the stipulation that there must be at least two clerks and that no one clerk might draw more than $2,900. A reduction of 8 1-3 per cent in pay was then enacted. All this while the wife of the speaker was serving as his secretary at approximately $3,900.

There was some discussion as to whether the 8 1-3 per cent reduction should be levied proportionately against both salaries of a member's clerk allowance or if the entire reduction could be taken out of one clerk's pay. It was decided that the reduction could be taken out of either clerk's pay, at the discretion of the member, and presently, when the name of Louise P. Engel was entered in place of Tully Garner, the pay for the job was reduced to $66.94. I am not very good at figures, but does that mean that the new clerk took the rap, as the Americans say?

Another Branch Capital.

Mr. Clapper discovered another branch capital or Little Washington in the state of Florida, where the elderly father of Congressman Green, the chairman of the important committee on the disposition of useless papers, was performing valuable services for the government at $256.94 per month. Mr. Green had another clerk in Washington, whose services, however, were only half as valuable. Distance lends enchantment to certain kinds of government work, and Mr. Green's other clerk received only $125 a month, according to the rolls.

The statesmen refused to adopt a law discriminating against their loved ones in the competition for government employment, although some laws were proposed which would have made them ineligible. It was argued, and justly, too, of course, that a statesman's loved ones are entitled to the same chance as other persons and the proposed law probably would have infringed their constitutional right.

Resented by Citizens.

However, of the 37 senators who were held up to this thoughtless and unscrupulous criticism, five either decided that the last campaign would be a good time to retire from public life or had this decision made for them by the citizens in the election. Of the 133 representatives in the list 57 also withdrew or were defeated, and you may read into these developments an idea that the citizens resented preferential treatment for their sisters and their cousins and their aunts in the government service.

But it will take more than the insinuating remarks of destructive critics to cause the statesmen to shirk their responsibilities to their loved ones. The known number on the pay rolls has been reduced considerably by the casualties of the election, but survivors remain and the integrity of the family unit is maintained in the citadel of the sacred heritage which all true home loving citizens hold near and dear.

3 Bandits Loot Office Despite Tear Gas Barrage

Three armed men yesterday entered the real estate office of Vacek & Co., 1751 West 47th street, and fled with $2,000, which they took from the cash drawer. Peter Super, 2017 West 50th street, a clerk, was the only employé in the office at the time. While the bandits were collecting their loot Super pressed a button which released a quantity of tear gas. The robbers, sneezing, coughing and cursing, protected their noses and eyes with handkerchiefs and made their way to fresh air.

Entries Closed

Leaders of the Garden club of Illinois met in executive session yesterday at the Palmer house to close entries in all the major classes of the annual flower show to be held March 31 to April 8 at Navy pier. Entries in the major classes of competition exceed those of last year, according to Mrs. O. W. Dynes Hinsdale, chairman of the flower show executive board and president of the state garden club.

Forty-six of the 125 member clubs in Chicagoland have already been listed for exhibits ranging from flower pots and window boxes to formal gardens, 20 by 60 feet in dimension, it was announced by Mrs. Dean Workman, La Grange, chairman of the committee on publicity. Other members of the executive board are Mrs. William L. Karcher, Freeport; Mrs. George A. Plamondon, Wheaton; Mrs. John T. Pirie, Lake Forest, and Mrs. George M. Kendall, Glen Ellyn.

Seven special exhibits have been planned for the show. These will be shown through the courtesy of the National Horticultural society, the National Association of Gardeners, Mrs. J. Ogden Armour, the James Norris estate of Lake Forest, the Morton Arboretum, the Cook county forest preserves, and the west parks board.

ROOSEVELT BUSY ON SELECTIONS FOR HIS CABINET

Farley Hears Pleas for Many Lesser Jobs.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 20.—[Special.]—Cabinet selections occupied the attention of President Elect Roosevelt in conferences with Democratic leaders before and after his meeting with President Hoover today.

A few doors away from the Roosevelt suite Chairman James Farley of the Democratic national committee was receiving scores of seekers for lesser offices that will be parceled out to the faithful after March 4.

Learns of His Selection.

The only certainty in the cabinet picture so far is Mr. Farley, who is to be postmaster general, the official who is the chief dispenser of patronage. Incidentally it appears that Mr. Farley learned of his selection for this post in a curious way.

A few weeks ago he was conferring with Mr. Roosevelt and Louis Howe. It was the day that the newspapers had told how Postmaster General Walter F. Brown had caused the government to buy him a new limousine that would give him sufficient headroom for a plug hat. Mr. Brown had been doing a lot of explaining.

"I see your predecessor is in a lot of trouble," Mr. Roosevelt remarked to Farley.

Mr. Roosevelt had further conversations today with Senator Carter Glass of Virginia and Senator Thomas J. Walsh of Montana, who are regarded by Democratic leaders as likely selections for the cabinet.

Rumors that could not be confirmed were that Mr. Roosevelt definitely had offered Senator Glass the place of secretary of the treasury, which he held under Wilson, and had offered the attorney generalship to Senator Walsh.

Gerry Men ioned for Navy Post.

On good authority it was learned that Norman H. Davis is not likely to be secretary of state, but is more likely to be ambassador to Great Britain. Owen D. Young still is a possibility for secretary of state.

For secretary of war the choice is said to lie between R. W. Bingham editor of the Louisville (Ky.) Courier-Journal, and James M. Thomson, son-in-law of the late Champ Clark and publisher of the New Orleans Item. Former Senator Peter G. Gerry of Rhode Island is a likely selection for secretary of the navy. Gov. George H. Dern of Utah is understood to have been eliminated from consideration for secretary of the interior, a post that may go to Senator Bronson Cutting [Rad., N. M.], as representative of the radical Republicans who supported Roosevelt. Senator Cutting had a talk with Mr. Roosevelt during the day.

Miss Frances Perkins of New York still is regarded a probable choice for secretary of labor and Henry M. Wallace of Iowa for secretary of agriculture.

BUDGET ACTION PUT OVER UNTIL EXTRA SESSION

Hoover Hits Congress for Delay.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 20.—[Special.]—Budget balancing was tossed today into the legislative hopper for the special session of congress to be called in April by President Elect Franklin D. Roosevelt.

The final death blow was struck when the Democratic majority of the house ways and means committee voted, 14 to 10, not to consider any new tax bills during the current session. Earlier action by Democratic leaders, indicating they had no intention of making any real cuts in governmental expenditures before the Roosevelt administration comes into power had virtually wrecked all prospects that the 1934 budget would be balanced at an early date.

The congressional decision to let national budgetary maters drift for the present was made the occasion for a new White House announcement in which President Hoover again took congress to task for failing to follow his economy recommendations. The President supplied data to show that congress had boosted his budget by $35,000,000 instead of having pared it down as Democratic leaders had claimed.

Sees Chance to Save.

According to the President's announcement, congress could have lessened taxation during the coming fiscal year if it had adopted in full all his recommendations for reorganizations and for financing activities of government departments. He said there was no question but that adoption of his reorganization program calling for the consolidation of fifty-eight bureaus would have "brought about great economies."

The Democratic majority of the ways and means committee headed by Majority Leader Henry T. Rainey of Illinois and Chairman James W. Collier of Mississippi, rode rough shod over the Republican administration's proposal that additional taxes to the amount of 500 millions should be voted before March 4 as a budget balancing move. A motion by Representative Willis C. Hawley [Rep., Ore.], former committee chairman, that the committee take up last year's administration tax bill, was defeated, 14 to 10.

Later Chairman Collier said the committee did not discuss the merits of various tax plans suggested. He explained that the committee had merely followed the views of the Democratic leadership that the tax question should go over to the new congress.

Gas Tax Move Defeated.

A move to continue the gasoline tax another year to raise 137 million dollars, also was defeated. Democratic spokesmen said they saw little reason for taking up the gas tax in view of the numerous reports President Hoover would veto the beer bill with its revenue raising provisions.

President Hoover delivered his new attack on the Democrats at one of his rare conferences with the press, saying there apparently had been no examination of the merits of the different executive orders.

ROOSEVELT GETS M'NARY'S REPORT ON FARM BILL

Washington, D. C., Jan. 20.—[Special.]—President Elect Roosevelt today called in Senator Charles L. McNary [Rep., Ore.], chairman of the senate committee on agriculture, to report on the progress of the farm allotment bill.

"The President elect," said Mr. McNary, "stated he hoped the committee would report out the bill in some form and that it would be passed and sent to the White House. He thought that no matter what might be its fate, hearings by the committee and discussions on the floor would be extremely helpful in connection with measures that might come up in the supposed special session. He said that during the campaign he had favored the inclusion of four commodities in the allotment bill—wheat, cotton, hogs, and tobacco. He stated further that he still is of the same opinion, but that it would be better to have fewer commodities than none at all, and that he would submit to the wisdom of the congress.

"I told him that the senate committee was making supreme efforts to simplify the measure in removing all complexities of administration and language and if this were done the committee likely would report the bill favorably. I told him I had no opinion what the senate action or that of the President would be."

SARGENT GROUP SELLS 5½ MILLION IN TAX WARRANTS

Dewey Reports on Initial Subscriptions.

Initial subscriptions totaling $5,500,000 for 1932 tax warrants, proceeds of which will go to pay city, school and county employés, were announced last evening by Charles S. Dewey following a meeting at the Chicago club.

Mr. Dewey was named chairman of the committee which is conducting the warrant sales drive by Fred W. Sargent, chairman of the citizens' committee on public expenditures. The Sargent committee, during the negotiations which resulted in the raising of funds so that the city and school board could meet their bond and interest payments on the first of the year, promised heads of the local governments to conduct such a drive.

Yesterday's meeting, somewhat of an impromptu affair, was attended by representatives of 150 of the largest taxpayers, individuals, estates and corporations in the county. By the terms of their subscriptions, they will pay 25 per cent on Feb. 1 and the remainder as the committee calls for it.

Meet Taxes with Warrants.

"The subscribers today will hold their warrants for the purpose of meeting their 1932 tax bills," said Mr. Dewey. "The committee will undertake to sell warrants to other taxpayers, large and small, for the same purpose.

"I think it should be emphasized, however, that the warrants are an excellent buy for any one, whether he intends them for tax payments or merely as a short term investment for 12 or 18 months. These 1932 warrants have investment attractions beyond any similar issue sold by local governments in the past.

"Both the city and school board have agreed to confine their issue of 1932 warrants to 50 per cent of their tax levy. The county board has been asked to confine its issue to 37 per cent of its levy. In former years some of the governments have sold warrants up to 75 per cent of their levies.

"Those warrants not used for tax payments will be redeemed out of the first cash received by the governments from their 1932 levies. The warrants will be retired according to their serial numbers and will be distributed by the committee in the order in which subscriptions are received."

Hears of County Defy.

While the sales meeting was in progress the Sargent committee received word that the county commissioners had refused to pass a resolution putting the 37 per cent limitation on their warrant sales. A representative of the Sargent committee is to confer with the county board on the matter.

Receipts of the tax warrant drive, Mr. Dewey pointed out, are to be used solely for the purpose of paying public employés. The Sargent committee set that condition in undertaking the drive and the heads of the governments have agreed.

The objective of the tax warrant drive is sales of 41 million dollars. If this objective is attained the resulting collections will provide two weeks' pay every month for all city, school, and county employés for a period of six months or longer. The governments will have available—in the form of cash tax collections which do not have to be applied to redemption of outstanding tax warrants—funds which may make it possible for them to meet additional pay rolls during the period.

LEWIS FAVORS SMALLER R. F. C. LOAN FOR CITY

Washington, D. C., Jan. 20.—(AP)—Senator James Hamilton Lewis [Dem., Ill.] tonight warned against false hopes in obtaining large loans immediately from the Reconstruction Finance corporation for Illinois cities.

He said Chicago now was asking for $100,000,000—$22,000,000 to pay teachers, $38,000,000 for the sanitary district, and $40,000,000 additional to pay policemen and other city employés.

"This," said Senator Lewis, "is too much. Let us start gradually by getting the Reconstruction Finance corporation to loan us, say, $22,000,000 to pay the teachers. Then with the loan downstate and Chicago banks will have demonstrated that the city's credit is good and will accept tax anticipation warrants at face value, knowing they can borrow on them from the corporation.

"I presented to the corporation Tuesday Chicago's plea for a loan of $60,000,000. The corporation understands, but to date is cautious about the loan. With proper examination it probably will agree to the loan."

Plan Drive for Sale of Tax Warrants in Chicago

County Board Defies Sargent Committee at a Hot Session

The county board yesterday voted down a resolution urged by the Sargent committee on public expenditures which would have limited the sale of 1932 corporate and highway fund tax anticipation warrants to 37 per cent of the expected levy. A storm of criticism directed against the Sargent committee preceded the defeat of the resolution, despite the warning that its adoption was necessary to obtain money for county employés who have been unpaid for six months.

After rejecting the proposal the county board put through a telephone call to the Sargent committee in session at the time. The board members obtained the promise that William Welch, executive chairman of the Sargent committee's group which has been negotiating the sale of tax anticipation warrants, would appear before the county board at 10 o'clock this morning.

Higher Limit for City.

Members of the county board who opposed the 37 per cent limitation pointed out that the city and school board were to be allowed to sell warrants totaling 50 per cent of their expected levies. The past practice of various tax spending bodies has been to sell warrants up to the legal limit of 75 per cent of the levy. The 37 per cent limit would mean that corporate fund warrants of $4,800,000 and highway warrants of $375,000 could be sold.

It was pointed out, however, that $3,300,000 worth of county corporate fund warrants are already in the hands of the public and the proposed limitation would therefore permit the sale of only $1,500,000 worth of the new warrants.

The resolution, which originated in the county finance committee, was read to the board by Michael J. O'Connor, assistant controller, and was greeted by immediate protests.

"We shouldn't be rushed into this thing," Commissioner Marie Plumb said. "Why should we be allowed to sell only 37 per cent when both the city and schools are allowed 50 per cent?"

Seek Better Terms.

"I think that we should appoint a committee to sit in with the Sargent committee to obtain the best terms possible," Commissioner George Miller said.

"I'm in sympathy with the attitude of the board," Commissioner Amelia Sears announced, "but I do not think we should delay any action that might bring a pay day. I think we should send a committee to sit in with the Sargent committee. It is paramount that we know what they are doing."

"If it's so paramount," objected Commissioner Plumb, "why do they wait until the eleventh hour to notify us?"

"They should have called us in while they were writing articles for the Saturday Evening Post," Commissioner Grace Fleming said.

Assistant Controller O'Connor counseled the board to adopt the resolution. Commissioner Miller said that he could not understand the limit set as the county board had been called the "most economically managed body in the state."

"Would any of the gentlemen on the Sargent committee allow an outsider to manage his affairs?" Commissioner Plumb wanted to know. "Last year when they demanded that we cut $5,000,000 from the budget we did it. If they had kept their promises to us it would be all right. But we haven't howled and they're slashing more now. It's an absolute indignity that they should state terms and then tell us to take it or leave it."

Protest Whealan Letter.

Another matter that brought protests from the board was a letter written by President Emmett Whealan to be sent to the Sargent committee. In it the president promised that the money obtained would be used only for payment of employés. Assistant Controller O'Connor waited for the protests to end and then quieted the meeting with the announcement that he also had a letter from Mayor Cermak in which the same promise was made in regard to city funds.

Plan New Committee.

The city council finance committee yesterday approved a motion to request Mayor Cermak to call a meeting at which the finance committee, the school board, the county, and the sanitary district would be represented. These bodies spend approximately 85 per cent of the county tax money. The meeting is for the purpose of working out a financial program for submission to the state legislature.

The finance committee suggested that a new committee should be formed from these three groups, of which the mayor is to be chairman. The new committee would call in all civic associations and experts who have tax legislation in mind and formulate its financial program from the suggestions submitted according to the plan.

The finance committee also went on record as favoring a plan to withhold all bills pertaining to the city's financial condition from the legislature until the unified program is presented. Otherwise, Ald. John L. Clark [30th], chairman of the finance committee, pointed out, there would be danger of some haphazard legislation being passed by the legislature.

Auditor to Draft Pay Scale.

School Auditor Harry Brackett was requested to work out cuts for the various classifications and bring the figures to another special budget conference Monday afternoon.

The revised resources of the board of education for the current year, against which the appropriations may be made, are as follows: 1932 tax levies, $55,984,444; surplus, representing uncollected taxes for prior years above expenditures for those years, $8,234,503, and miscellaneous revenues, such as rents and the state distributive fund, $5,223,472.

A resolution protesting against cuts in teachers' salaries was adopted earlier in the afternoon by the Federation of Women High School Teachers, of which Dorothy Weil is president, in a meeting in the Auditorium hotel. The communication will be sent to the board.

Ends Life with Auto Gas Near Undertaking Parlor

Horace G. Warne, 60 years old, of 6717 Dorchester avenue, was found dead yesterday in an automobile which was parked across the street from an undertaking establishment in Aurora. Death was caused by carbon monoxide fumes. Police said that a rubber hose was found running from the exhaust through the floor of the car. In Warne's hand police found an unsigned note which asked that the body be cremated.

Saves $750 Ring by Telling Bandit It's an Imitation

A robber entered the dress shop of Ethel M. Doll at 312 East Oak street last evening and took $30 and a diamond ring valued at $2,800 from the owner. A woman customer also had to give up $10, but saved a diamond ring by telling the bandit it was an imitation gem worth less than $1. Miss Doll, who gave the name of the customer as Mildred Cherry, said the latter told her the ring was worth $750.

SENATE GETS BILL TO PREVENT FARM FORECLOSURES

Robinson Measure Calls for Scaling Mortgages.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 20.—[Special.]—The fourth Democratic proposal for aid of the farmer was put forth today by Senator Joe T. Robinson of Arkansas, minority senate leader, in a measure designed to prevent farm foreclosures and to aid in compromising and scaling down farm mortgage debts.

This latest addition to the series which now includes the allotment bill and two measures for revision of the federal farm credit system, is to be proposed as an amendment to the bankruptcy bill now pending in the house.

Scaling Down Indebtedness.

The bankruptcy measure—a combination of the La Guardia and McKeown bills—unanimously was reported out today by the house judiciary committee and was announced as a means for scaling down individual and corporate indebtedness through voluntary settlements between debtor and creditor.

Most substantial effect of the farm amendment drafted by Senator Robinson would be the creation of "conciliation commissioners" in the 2,911 farm counties of the United States, who would act as special referees in composing farm debt cases. In less populous or more prosperous areas a commissioner would serve more than one county; in populous and distressed areas more than one commissioner to a county might be appointed.

Provision is made that while any proceeding for composition or extension of the debt is in progress foreclosure proceedings in state or other courts shall be stayed. The Robinson proposal specifically stays foreclosure proceedings instituted but not completed before composition negotiations are begun.

For Conciliation Petitions.

Unlike the other Democratic farm bills, Senator Robinson said his proposal is based on principles recently adopted by the conference of major farm organizations. The system thus set up would apply only to conciliation petitions within five years.

Chairman Hatton W. Sumners [Dem., Tex.] of the judiciary committee said that no program for consideration of the bankruptcy measure in the house has been decided upon.

The theory upon which the bankruptcy bill is based, according to Chairman Sumners, is that both debtor and creditor can be better served through a readjustment of the debtor's affairs than through bankruptcy proceedings. To this end, the bill provides that bankruptcy can be stayed, pending the submission of readjustment proposals by the debtor, or by a majority of his creditors.

In its present form, the bill is understood to have three major sections, dealing respectively with individuals, corporations, and railroads. In theory the operation of each section is substantially the same, although there are, of necessity, major differences as to technicalities and procedure.

BARS HARVARD'S STUDENT PAPER FROM U. S. MAIL

Cambridge, Mass., Jan. 20. — [Special.]—Cambridge postal authorities tonight barred from the mails the latest issue of the Harvard Lampoon, "Tutors, Just Tutors," which even the board of censors insisted on having cleaned up before publication.

Citizens of Cambridge had protested in such numbers to F. W. Smith, superintendent of the Brattle Square substation, that he ordered the entire issue of nearly 3,000 copies held up until an opinion might be obtained from the solicitor of the Boston postal district and authority for mailing be granted by the postmaster of Boston.

One of the principal faults found by shocked readers of the issue was that its cover closely follows the general appearance of "Babies, Just Babies," a magazine devoted to the interests of children edited by Mrs Franklin D. Roosevelt, wife of the President elect of the United States.

The cover of the magazine features a full page photograph of a nude baby with the unmistakable features of a member of the faculty superimposed.

LONDON'S BUS STRIKE SPREADS; 5,000 MEN OUT

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Jan. 20.—The strike of bus drivers and conductors, which began in a single garage over an increased speed of seven-tenths of one mile per hour, threatens tonight to cripple London's chief form of transportation.

According to a recent wage agreement, the drivers accepted higher speeds in order to avoid wage cuts, but the Forest Gate drivers balked and five other garages joined them in a sympathy strike which involves nearly 5,000 men. Forty-three bus lines and about 700 buses are affected.

The strike began without union sanction in the first garage, but today the strike fever was spreading rapidly to most of the big terminals. Meetings were called by the busmen to decide whether others would walk out in support of the higher speed protest. Union officials are conferring with company officials in an effort to settle the walkout. Long lines of people formed at subway stations in the affected areas today.

CHICAGO IS HOST TO 24 STUDENTS FROM SO. AFRICA

A party of 24 graduates and undergraduate students from colleges and universities of South Africa stepped off a Big Four train yesterday afternoon at the Woodlawn station to see the sights of Chicago. Until Monday they will be guests of groups and individuals and will visit points of interest, including the stock yards, the grounds of the Century of Progress exposition, the planetarium, Shedd aquarium, the Field museum, Hull house, and the Merchandise Mart.

The students are staying at International house at the University of Chicago, and their special hosts are Miss Mary S. Hill, Winnetka, and Gorge L. Treadwell, secretary of the Rotary club of Chicago. Chicago is included in a month's tour of the United States and Canada by the group.

The trip was arranged under the auspices of the National Student foundation of South Africa and America, working with the International Confederation of Students. The members of the party, seventeen women and seven men, are of English, Dutch, and French descent. Their tour is one of the projects resulting from the movement among students to promote international good will.

WHEATON QUIZ BARES VIOLATION OF BANKING ACT

Assistant United States District Attorney Owen A. West announced yesterday that his study of a preliminary report of federal bank examiners on the condition of the closed First National Bank of Wheaton had revealed probable violations of the national banking act.

Whether prosecutions would be instituted, he said, depends on findings of the United States bureau of investigation.

The bank was ordered closed Wednesday by the board of directors after it was reported irregularities of between $25,000 and $50,000 had been found in the accounts of M. B. Taylor, vice president and cashier. Charles W. Hadley, former chairman of the Illinois commerce commission, is president of the bank, which had deposits of $450,000.

ALDERMEN GET TAXI AUDIT; ASK FOR NEW REPORT

Councilman Near a Clash with Attorney.

An audit of the books of the Yellow Cab, Checker Cab, and Public Taxi Service companies was submitted yesterday to the council subcommittee meeting for the purpose of revising the present ordinance fixing taxicab rates and the conditions of operation. After considering the audit, the subcommittee, which has been holding public hearings for the last two months, ordered another report and adjourned until next Thursday.

The next document to be considered by the subcommittee is to be prepared by R. F. Kelker, transportation engineer. He was ordered to submit a report on the safety of cabs, the rates, and on the effect of putting more cabs on the city streets.

Aldermen Avert Clash.

A threatened clash was averted by explanations by aldermen present at the close of the session yesterday. Attorney Lee Daniels, representing the Public Taxi Service company, was speaking as Ald. John Toman [23d], chairman of the subcommittee, started to leave the room.

"We're glad you're going," Ald. Thomas J. O'Grady [14th] remarked facetiously. Thinking that Attorney Daniels made the remark, Ald. Toman whirled from the door angrily.

"I'll throw you out of the window, Mr. Daniels," the irate alderman shouted. Peace was restored by speedy explanations.

The audit of the Yellow Cab company books showed that during the first ten months of 1932 the average revenue per trip was 72½ cents and the net profit per trip approximately 3½ cents. The drivers averaged 38 per cent of the bookings, the audit pointed out, and said that any cut in fare would automatically reduce the drivers' commission. A reduction of 5 cents in the rates would virtually eliminate any profits on the basis of the earnings for the first ten months of 1932, the audit said.

The audit also showed that the company earned approximately 12 per cent on the book value of its investment in 1931, and approximately 7 per cent during the first ten months of 1932. Personal injury claims cost the company more than $1,000,000 a year, the audit disclosed.

Figures on Other Companies.

The audit of the Checker company showed that accounts receivable, mostly from drivers, had jumped from $86,957 on Dec. 31, 1931, to $205,798 on Nov. 30, 1932. The audit showed a net profit of $40,129 for the first eleven months of 1932, but this will be wiped out by uncollectible debts, it was pointed out.

The audit of the Public Taxi service company for the month the cut rate company has operated showed expenses of $34.77 per cab as compared with an average revenue of $30.33 per cab.

LATEST PRICE LIST SHOWS DROP IN FOOD COSTS

Groceries and Meats on Bargain Counter Today.

BY PAUL POTTER.

Housewives will find that groceries are on the bargain counter in Chicago this morning. They will discover that prices of a wide variety of foodstuffs have dropped substantially in a week.

In fact, a survey made last night of the trends in fruits, and vegetables, canned goods, meats, and the many other staples around which the week-end shopping list is built, shows that in most items prices have dropped and in the others there has been no increase in prices.

Food Dollar Doubles.

A comparison of prices posted in representative groceries and meat markets last night for today's business, with the prices of two years ago brings out the fact that this morning's food dollar is worth nearly two food dollars of Jan. 21, 1931. Such items as navy beans, for instance, at 2 pounds for a nickel, are about one-fourth as much as they were two years ago.

And the recent drop in sugar prices to 10 pounds for 43 cents found this important commodity retailing at one-third of its 1931 cost. Meats are from 21 to 45 per cent lower, pork and beans just one-half their 1931 price, and many other foods in the same attractive proportions.

The following table shows how food prices have dropped in the last two years:

Commodity.	Per cent drop in 2 yrs.
Flour, pound	37.5
Rice, pound	30
Navy beans, dry, pound	72.2
Potatoes, northern white, pound	60
Onions, dry, pound	50
Cabbage, pound	50
Pork and beans, 16 oz. can	50.5
Peas, No. 2 can	25
Tomatoes, No. 2 can	23
Prunes, medium, pound	46
Roasting chickens, pound	48
Leg of lamb, pound	31
Veal cutlets, pound	22
Stewing veal, pound	50
Sirloin steak, pound	55
Pork chops, center cuts, pound	21
Chuck roast, pound	27
Lard, pound	45

While the general range of food prices today reflects the influences of lowered wholesale values, many groups of stores are offering extra values in their lists of "specials." Butter, eggs, sugar, coffee, and oranges are included in these special low values.

Eggs and Butter Drop.

Those watching the last minute changes in food marts will find this morning that butter and eggs continue to head the list, following a fortnight of gradually lower values. Eggs of a grade that a week ago were worth 21 cents per dozen are now 21 cents. Some grades of eggs dropped as much as a cent apiece, the range today being 21 to 25 cents a dozen, depending upon quality and size.

Market authorities yesterday declared that weather conditions had been favorable this month for creamery butter production. The result is that in both Chicago and New York housewives are assured of good quality, even with a drop of 3 to 6 cents a pound during the week.

For the main dish tomorrow the family will find either beef or pork cuts the most economical purchase. Several stores are featuring veal in a variety of cuts as well. Center cuts of pork chops are as low as 18 cents a pound, chuck roasts 16 cents, and whole hams at 10 cents a pound.

Potatoes Are Cheaper.

Both white and sweet potatoes are in today's markets at somewhat lower prices than two weeks ago. At 5 cents a package cream cheese also is an outstanding value.

In the wholesale and retail fruit and vegetable markets, oranges and apples set new low prices this week end. Good eating apples from Michigan are offered by grocers at 4 pounds for 19 cents. The large Rome beauties for baking also carry tempting price tags.

New cabbage and green beans both have come down in price this week in many store windows. Both are shipped in fresh from the southland gardens.

Medium sized oranges were recommended as the most economical for today's shopping list. In the local wholesale markets where Florida and California oranges arrive a shortage of the extra small and extra large sized oranges was reported yesterday.

Some stores are selling bananas at 5 cents a pound, thus placing them on the bargain list.

Housewives will find canned goods marked down to new low levels today. Peas and tomatoes in the family sized No. 2 cans are nearly one-third lower than the 1931 prices.

COUPLE REFUSES TO STAY EVICTED FROM COTTAGE

Justice of the Peace James Barber of Evanston yesterday appealed to State's Attorney Courtney for advice on how to evict Mr. and Mrs. Wilhelm Gielow, an elderly couple, from their cottage at 1498 Perry avenue, Des Plaines.

Twice the justice has ordered them evicted for nonpayment of rent and each time neighbors and friends have moved them back again.

The eviction orders were made on complaint of Mrs. Edna A. Sanger, receiver for the property. After the second eviction order had been carried out last November the constables changed the locks on the cottage doors. The neighbors, however, pried open the locks and carried the furnishings back into the cottage.

Reveal $4,200 Robbery of Jay Graham's Lake Home

Chicago police were asked last night to search for two diamond rings and three jeweled trophies which were stolen from the home of Jay Graham at Long Lake, in western Lake county. Graham is a former national trap-shooting champion and a Democratic political leader in the county. The jewels, valued at $4,200, disappeared a week ago.

BANKERS CALLED BY ETTELSON IN INSULL INQUIRY

Samuel Insull Jr. Also Subpœnaed.

To substantiate his charge that Samuel Insull framed the receivership of the Insull Utility Investments, Inc., Samuel Ettelson, former corporation counsel, procured subpœnas yesterday for eight persons to appear for examination before Garfield Charles, federal referee in bankruptcy, next Thursday, when the election of a trustee for the defunct investment trust is to come up.

Deputy marshals had served six of the subpœnaed witnesses last night and expected to serve the other two today. Those already summoned are Samuel Insull Jr., vice chairman of the three operating utilities formerly controlled by his father; Albert W. Harris, chairman of the board of the Harris Trust and Savings bank; James R. Leavell, president of the Continental-Illinois National Bank and Trust company; Edward E. Brown, vice president of the First National bank; Attorney John Wing of the firm of Isham, Lincoln & Beale, and Solomon Smith, president of the Northern Trust company. Howard W. Fenton, president of the Harris bank, and Abner J. Stilwell, vice president of the Continental-Illinois bank, are expected to be served today.

Hears of Secret Meeting.

Mr. Ettelson said he had information that these eight and three other persons attended a secret meeting in Samuel Insull's office, 72 West Adams street, the day before the receivership of Insull Utility Investments and other Insull holding companies last April 13, at which, he charges, Samuel Insull named the receivers and attorneys who were to administer the companies.

All eight will be asked to state what transpired at the meeting, Mr. Ettelson declared, and to tell whether they entered by the front door and departed by a secret rear door, as he says he has been informed. In addition, he said, Samuel Insull Jr. will be asked whether he or any bank has been forwarding funds to the elder Insull, who recently won his fight to resist extradition from Greece to face charges of larceny and embezzlement in the Chicago courts.

Appeals Master's Ruling.

On the basis of his charge, first made last week in a bankruptcy hearing on Insull Utility Investments, Mr. Ettelson moved that Referee Charles set aside the election as trustee of the company Howard Fentress, La Salle street investment banker who, he declared, was one of Insull's nominees. An appeal of the referee's ruling against Mr. Fentress will be carried to Federal Judge Walter C. Lindley, who originally named Mr. Fentress receiver of the company.

CHARGE FIVE WITH MURDER AFTER 13 DIE IN AN OHIO HOTEL FIRE

Cleveland, O., Jan. 20.—(AP)—Five men described by police as a $2,000,000 arson gang were accused of first degree murder today in the burning of the downtown Ellington apartment hotel in which 13 persons perished last June 9.

The charges were made in warrants sworn to by Safety Director Frank J. Merrick, who said the five conspired to burn a barber supply shop on the ground floor of the building and collect $20,000 in insurance.

He asserted L. J. Kamins, 64 year old former attorney now serving an arson sentence in Rockview penitentiary, Pennsylvania, was the "king pin" of the Ellington fire and has obtained a large income for years as an arson expert.

Besides Kamins the warrants named Sam Nieman and Paul Childs, Pittsburgh fire insurance adjusters; Ben Hirsch of Aliquippa, suburb of Beaver Falls, Pa., and Ray I. Turk of Cleveland, manager of the American Beauty and Barber Supply company.

"Our evidence," Merrick said, "will disclose that this gang has been setting fires all over the midwest and in the last 10 years has set fires from New York to St. Louis that caused $2,000,000 worth of damage."

NITTI WANTS TO GO SOUTH TO RECUPERATE

Frank Nitti, alleged head of the remnants of the Capone gang, wants to go south to convalesce from wounds he received when police raided his office in the La Salle-Wacker building several weeks ago.

This was disclosed yesterday when the charge against him of assault with a deadly weapon was called for hearing before Judge Donald S. McKinlay in the felony court. Nitti's attorney, Rocco De Stefano, asked for a thirty day continuance so that his client could leave Chicago to recuperate. Nitti was not in court.

Judge McKinlay continued the hearing until Jan. 27 and ordered Assistant State's Attorney Charles S. Dougherty to have Nitti examined by a physician.

TWO GUNMEN ROB CIGAR STORE.

Two gunmen robbed the United Cigar store at 122 West Van Buren street of $25 early yesterday after forcing two customers into telephone booths.

POLICE RESCUE CAB DRIVER HELD BY BANDIT TRIO

A Warren avenue police squad rescued a cab driver from two bandits and their girl confederate early this morning, shooting one of the robbers and capturing him and his accomplices. The squad sighted the cab at Monroe street and Winchester avenue. Two men sitting in the front seat aroused their suspicion and they drew alongside.

"Pull over to the curb," the squad leader ordered.

"I can't; I'm being held up," cried the cab driver, Howard French. With that the taxi shot ahead, French being ordered to speed away on threat of death. The police followed. The cab sped west in Jackson boulevard. Near Garfield park police bullets punctured a rear tire. Two men jumped out. One, Charles Perry French, 29 years old, was stopped with a bullet in the right arm. The other, Alje K. Carroll, 27, surrendered with him. Inside the cab the police found Miss Rose Fisher, 18, formerly of Royalton, Ill. All three live at 1812 Adams street.

FUTURE OF IRISH FREE STATE IS STAKE AT POLLS

De Valera or Cosgrave? It's a Tossup.

BY JOHN STEELE.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

DUBLIN, Irish Free State, Jan. 20.—Citizens of the Irish Free State will go to the polls next Tuesday in the most important election held since the Free State came into existence eleven years ago.

They will have to decide between Fianna Fail, as represented by the government of President Eamon de Valera, which has been in power less than a year, and that of former President William T. Cosgrave, who built up the Free State and guided its destinies after the death of its founders, Arthur Griffith and Michael Collins, until a nearly a year ago.

What Rivals Stand For.

De Valera, whatever he says now, stands for eventual separation from the British empire and the erection of Ireland as an independent republic. On the other hand, Cosgrave stands for equal partnership as a dominion in the British commonwealth of nations, with everything that makes for independence except the name, and with its many advantages in trade, prestige, and defense.

At the moment he would be a foolish man who would prophesy the result. I have spent most of a night and a day talking to Dublin citizens and it all depends on the class and condition of the interlocutor as to what the reply would be.

Hotel servants, taxi drivers, newspaper sellers, and street beggars, of whom there are plenty, all favor De Valera. Hotel managers, lawyers, doctors, and storekeepers declare Cosgrave is certain to win. It is significant, however, that no one attempts to forecast a majority in the dail eireann. All declare it will be a close fight and all agree that neither Cosgrave nor De Valera will have a clear majority.

Depend on Other Parties.

If Cosgrave wins it will be with the help of the new Center party, which is led by Frank MacDermot, son of "The MacDermot," prince of Collavin, one of the old Irish kings. If De Valera is able to form a government, political observers insist it will be only with the help of the Labor party.

The testimony of the election rallies is equally confusing. Men who followed both leaders in their tours throughout the country declare that while De Valera's meetings were more enthusiastic, Cosgrave's were larger. This may be explained by the fact that De Valera's followers are chiefly from the younger and poorer class of people, while Cosgrave's supporters are from the more substantial farmers and business men.

All sorts of cross currents are complicating any attempt to predict the result. Today I talked to a woman of the old Unionist class who is an earnest admirer of Cosgrave and a supporter of his policies. When she told me she intended to vote for De Valera I was astonished, but she explained that she will do so for the sake of peace.

Woman Fears Shooting.

If Cosgrave loses, she explained, he and his followers, being constitutionalists, will accept the verdict of the voters and carry on as the opposition in the Irish parliament. If Cosgrave wins, however, she is convinced that De Valera's Fianna Fail will not accept the verdict and will attempt a coup d'état."

"And then there will be shooting," she exclaimed.

This opinion was simplified by a leading Irish politician who was an independent member of the dissolved dail. He declared he firmly believes that the Cosgrave-MacDermot combination will win, but that the Irish republican army, with the aid of some members of the present government, would try to keep control of the government by force against the victors at the polls.

It should be made clear that none of these persons suggests that De Valera himself is likely to take part in these unconstitutional acts, but the theory is that he is in the hands of extremists upon whom he relies for power.

Coup Certain to Fail.

If any such coup is attempted, however, it will almost certainly be unsuccessful. The time is gone when a mob of half armed youths calling themselves the "Army of the Republic" can hold up the country. The Irish national army is now a well trained unit and will serve faithfully the legal government of the country, whatever that may be.

Political prophets of all parties now are busy compiling figures on the possible result. There are a total of 153 members in the dail. The late government combination of Fianna Fail and Labor held 79 seats, while Cosgrave's combination of Cumann na nGaedheal [League of the Gaels] totaled 74. Fianna Fail's estimate of the new dail is 90 for their combination and 63 for the Cosgraveites. Cumann na nGaedheal's figures are 87 for their party and 65 for De Valera, while MacDermot's party claims 84 for the Cosgraveites, of which the Center party will hold 20 and 69 for De Valera.

MacDermot, however, has announced that if things turn out as he hopes, he will use his balance of power to force De Valera and Cosgrave to form a national government and sink the old differences.

De Valera Against Coalition.

Cosgrave might be willing to follow this course, but De Valera has long ago declared against any coalition. If he sticks to this position, nothing is left for MacDermot but to support Cosgrave.

Whatever happens, neither party will have a mandate to establish a republic. De Valera has carefully dodged this subject and Cosgrave throughout has accepted the present status of Ireland as a dominion under the treaty of 1922.

De Valera tonight issued a manifesto detailing his platform. In it he demands a strong majority over all parties combined so as to assure a permanent administration for five years, but the main features of his policy are unchanged. The oath of allegiance to the British crown must go, the land annuities must be cut in two, home industries must be protected and tillage encouraged, he says. The senate as constituted now must be abolished. If the second chamber is retained its membership must be reduced.

Extends Palm of Peace.

De Valera proposes to scale down the higher civil service salaries, but not those of the middle and lower classes. He desires the "friendliest relations with Great Britain" and says he will continue to strive to get British statesmen to realize that lasting peace between the British and Irish peoples only can be secured on the basis that the Irish people shall be at liberty to determine their own governmental institutions and the extent of their coöperation with Britain on matters of common concern.

He proposes to continue trade preferences with Britain. His Fianna Fail party promises to promote unity, rule justly and impartially, to hold all citizens equal before the law, and to protect all with the resources at his command.

WM. B. WARD, BAKING CORPORATION HEAD, LEFT $3,770,000 NET

New York, Jan. 20.—[Special.]—William B. Ward, president of the Ward Baking corporation who died Feb. 6, 1929, left an estate appraised today at $4,023,788 gross and $3,770,421 net.

The bulk of the estate consisted of $3,696,871 as the value of six trust funds comprised of stock of the Ward Foundation corporation. At the time of his death he owned only $27,934 in securities and the only baking stocks were 97 shares of preferred stock of his company worth $7,954 and three shares of B stock worth $30. The largest holdings were 100 shares Princeton inn and 2,000 shares Associated Bond and Share, each worth $10,000.

Six worthless stocks included 1,500 shares Pennsylvania-Texas Petroleum corporation and 1,500 shares of the Ward Securities corporation. The stock of the securities company suffered heavily during the market depression in 1929, when it was stated that Mr. Ward had spent about 15 million dollars trying to protect the stock in a falling market.

Mr. Ward left to his wife, Ethel Haney Ward at New Rochelle, jewelry worth $2,450 and the residuary estate, $29,550. Mrs. Ward, however, was beneficiary of insurance policies said to aggregate $3,000,000.

Two Trucks with Cargoes Hijacked in City Streets

Hijackers took possession of two trucks with cargoes valued at a total of $12,000 in south side street yesterday afternoon. One of the trucks, belonging to the Willett company and loaded with coffee, was driven by Joseph Rasch. At 18th and Clark streets he was kidnaped and carried several miles in an automobile. The coffee was valued at $10,000. The other truck, owned by Samuel Cassel & Co., 1423 South Halsted street, was loaded with tobacco worth $2,000. It was taken from the driver, Rudolph Rehac, at 18th and Halsted streets.

BLAINE TRIES TO GET REPEAL BILL BEFORE SENATE

Blocked, He Says It Will Be Brought Up Soon.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 20.—[Special.]—The pending resolution for repeal of the eighteenth amendment will be called up in the senate at the earliest opportunity, probably next week, Senator John J. Blaine [Rad., Wis.] announced today.

As chairman of the judiciary subcommittee which drafted the resolution Senator Blaine sought to bring it before the senate today by unanimous consent. His move was blocked by the objection of Senator Reed Smoot [Rep., Utah], who "intends to live prohibition until I die" and who not long ago promised to do everything in his power to prevent outright repeal.

To Follow Banking Bill.

Immediately Senator Blaine announced that he would attempt to bring up the resolution as soon as the Glass banking bill had been voted upon and the postoffice and treasury appropriation bill passed. Should he be refused unanimous consent, the senator declared, he would move to take up the repeal resolution and make it the unfinished business before the senate.

Two major amendments are awaiting consideration of the resolution. One will be brought up by Senator Blaine to strike out the clause relating to federal regulation of the saloon. As now drawn the resolution provides for federal protection of the dry states and gives congress concurrent power with the states to regulate "intoxicating liquor to be drunk on the premises where sold."

The other, to be presented by Senator Sam Bratton [Dem., N. M.], will attempt to replace the resolution's present provision for ratification by legislatures with ratification by conventions. The amendment will be pushed by the Democrats as an answer to their platform pledge of ratification in this manner.

Amendments Proposed.

Other amendments may be offered and supported by the Democrats, Senator Joe T. Robinson of Arkansas, minority leader, stated today, but he refused to elaborate on their nature.

While none of the three senators—Blaine, Bratton, or Robinson—has made a canvass of the possible outcome, they agreed that the vote would be close.

CANADA AND U. S. TRADE NOTES ON SEAWAY POWER

Question of Control Is Cleared Up.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 20.—[Special.]—The notes recently exchanged by Secretary Stimson and W. D. Herridge, the Canadian minister, concerning water diversion at the Massena canal and the Grass river in connection with development of the St. Lawrence waterway were made public by the state department today to show that the United States and New York state would not be restricted in dealing with the power question there.

During hearings on the treaty before the foreign relations committee the point was made by representatives of the New York power authority that the treaty might give undue benefits to the Aluminum Company of America, which operates a plant at the Massena canal. The report of the joint board of engineers, it was contended, called for water diversion in the canal and the river in a way that might mean advantages to the company.

The state department denied this, but said it was ready to exchange notes with Canada to confirm that there would be no undue benefits given.

Ontario Points in Dispute.

Secretary Stimson in his note requested the government of Canada to "state whether it will join this government in a statement of the following principles:

"1. The effect of the Great Lakes-St. Lawrence deep waterway treaty, signed at Washington, July 18, 1932, is not in any respect to recognize, confirm or establish any rights or claims of any person or corporation in respect to the diversion of water for power purposes through the Massena canal and Grass river, or to limit the freedom of the United States or the state of New York, or other competent authority to treat the question of the continuance, control, or elimination of such diversion as a domestic question.

"2. The Canadian government does hereby, and will, upon request, formally consent to the modification or elimination of the works provided for in the report of the joint board of engineers in connection with the said diversion through the Massena canal.

"3. The Canadian government recognizes that the competent authorities in the United States are free to eliminate the diversion of water for power purposes through the Massena canal and Grass river and to use the water so released through the main river works in conformity with the provisions of Article IV. of the said treaty."

Herridge Confirms Statements.

In his reply Minister Herridge writes:

"My government shares the views of the United States government that it was not the purpose of the treaty to fix in any respect the policy to be pursued in regard to the maintenance of such diversion. It is the view of the Canadian government that the continuance or discontinuance of that diversion is a purely domestic matter for determination by competent authorities in the United States.

"The Canadian government therefore joins with the United States government in a declaration of the following principles" (which are repeated substantially in Secretary Stimson's words).

CONTRACTOR IS KILLED IN PLUNGE FROM 23D FLOOR

William F. Watson, 52 years old, 7829 Kingston avenue, president of Monahan Brothers, Inc., plastering contractors, 6053 Eberhart avenue, plunged to his death yesterday from a window of the billiard room of the Builders' club, on the 23d floor of the Builders' building, 228 North La Salle street.

WM. F. WATSON.

The following note, addressed to his wife, was found in his pocket by police:

"Dearie: I have not wanted to worry you or the boys, but I have been having dizzy spells. It must be because of the unsettled condition of Monahan Brothers. The effect on our personal finances has me worried. I believed I must visit the doctor again and have my blood pressure taken. Whenever I have a dizzy spell I must push to the window for air. Last September I nearly fell out of a window. I am writing this so that in case of any accident you will know what caused it. Your loving husband."

Other defendants in the same case, John Bain, former head of the banking chain, his son, John H. Bain and his son-in-law, W. Merle Fisher, are represented by Attorney Harry Olson. Former chief justice of the Municipal court, Judge Fardy continued the hearing until Jan. 26.

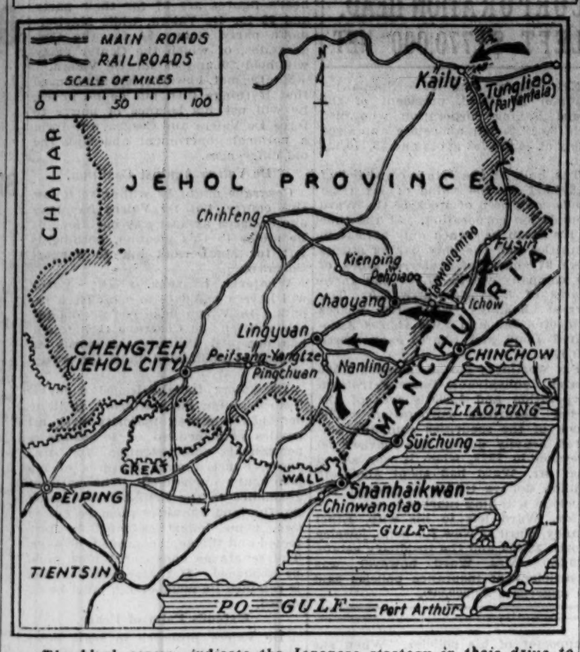
JAPS OPEN DRIVE ON JEHOL



The black arrows indicate the Japanese strategy in their drive to seize Jehol province from China. Dispatches from Tientsin last night said the Japanese were centering their advance from Manchuria toward Lingyuan, which is at the junction of important highways. The Japanese are also entering Jehol from the northeast by way of Kailu. The map shows the vast system of roads which China has built through the Great Wall into Jehol and in Jehol itself in an effort to facilitate its military defense.

DR. HALL QUITS AS DIRECTOR OF PUBLIC HEALTH

Springfield, Ill., Jan. 20.—[Special.]—The second member of the Emmerson cabinet to say farewell to the Illinois capitol took his departure today. He was Dr. Andy Hall, director of public health.

Along with other Emmerson directors, Dr. Hall submitted his resignation to Gov. Henry Horner on inauguration day. The governor accepted it today. Dr. Hall plans to return immediately to his home in Mount Vernon, the home town of former Gov. Emmerson. Until his successor is appointed the department will be under the direction of the assistant commissioner, Dr. A. C. Baxter of Springfield.

Gov. Horner also relieved Walter Moody of Monmouth of his duties as chief of the state highway police. They will be taken over temporarily by Sergt. M. L. Taylor, who also hails from Monmouth. In announcing the change the governor said he had heard no criticism of Moody's work and the order was not a reflection upon him in any way.

The governor held another conference with representatives of the United Mine Workers and the Progressive Mine Workers, but the only announcement was that another conference will be held next Tuesday.

THIRTY ARE INJURED AS TORNADO STRIKES TEXAS TOWN IN DARK

Paris, Tex., Jan. 20.—(AP)—Thirty persons were injured, six seriously, in a tornado which swept out of the darkness tonight and flattened the hamlet of Manchester, on the Red river, 40 miles northeast of Paris.

Ten buildings were demolished at Manchester, including the church and the school building.

Roads of the countryside are well nigh impassable and, in the darkness, physicians and rescue workers attempting to reach the scene had difficulty in locating those injured.

An incomplete check of the losses showed that the tornado cut its way through the farming section for 35 miles from Howland to Manchester, leaving a trail of damaged buildings and uprooted trees.

TOKIO THREATENS CHINA; CLAIMS JEHOL PROVINCE

Demands Nanking End Its "Aggressive Action."

ments have arrived at Shanhaikwan from Chinchow, while Japanese warships are landing military supplies. Japanese civilians at Shanhaikwan are reported to be evacuating toward Mukden.

Japanese cavalry patrols are said to have been dispatched through Chiumenkow pass, in the Great Wall north of Shanhaikwan. Their destination is said to be Lingyuan, situated at the junction of important highways.

In addition to moves into Jehol from the south, Chinese reports say another Japanese column is entering from the northeast by way of Kailu.

Japan Calls Recruits.

TOKIO, Jan. 20.—(AP)—Throughout Japan army recruits began reporting to their stations today in obedience to a war office decision which is expected to increase by 50 per cent Japan's man power in Manchuria.

A spokesman for the war office announced that the army authorities had decided to dispatch a portion of the regular 1933 conscripts immediately to the command of Gen. Nobuyoshi Muto the supreme military official in Manchuria.

Military commentators said the rookies would be available to garrison quiet sectors, thereby releasing Manchurian veterans for real fighting. The present strength of Gen. Muto's command is estimated at 40,000 men.

The 1931 class of conscripts, now veterans of the Manchurian campaigns, will remain in service despite the fact that their two year term has expired.

League Issues Ultimatum.

GENEVA, Jan. 20.—(AP)—Dissatisfied that Japan failed to reply to its compromise proposal on conciliation of the Manchurian question, the committee of 19 of the league of nations today presented the Japanese with a virtual ultimatum that the response should be ready when the committee reconvenes tomorrow afternoon.

The committee's proposal is in the form of a question: Will Japan withdraw other objections to the plan of settlement suggested by league leaders if the league assembly agrees with Japan that the United States and Russia shall not be invited to participate in a conciliation commission?

These other objections which Japan advances and which the committee is unwilling to accept are that the resolution embodying the conciliation formula shall not mention the question of recognition of the Japanese sponsored state of Manchukuo; that it shall provide for a small conciliation body of five or seven members instead of a larger one; and that this body shall have advisory and not directive functions in direct negotiations between Japan and China.

One member of the committee said that if Japan's position tomorrow is unsatisfactory, the committee will proceed to draft a report as authorized by paragraph 4, article 15, of the covenant of the league. This paragraph provides for recommendations for league action.

DEATH THREATS SENT KINCAID MINERS BY MAIL

Tovey, Ill., Jan. 21 [Saturday].—(AP)—The receipt of threatening letters by almost a dozen locally employed miners was being investigated today by postal inspectors upon request of Mrs. Amelia Hull, postmistress at nearby Kincaid.

The letters, written in longhand and apparently by the same person, were received yesterday by members of the United Mine Workers' union employed in the Peabody mine No. 7 at Kincaid, Mrs. Hull said.

The writer advised those to whom the letters were addressed to "Kiss your wife good-by" and "You have scabbed it long enough." Each contained a threat of death.

While Mrs. Hull would not reveal the names of all the recipients, she said the first was reported to her by Carl Ray and that Fred Eddie, an engineer at the mine, and Henry Honore also received them.

A postal inspector has arrived here from Pana, Ill.

DEFENSE USES STATE WITNESS IN CORRY TRIAL

Blame Gangster Films for Boy Killer's Act.

CRIMINAL COURT.

Walter Kestin and William Neworaski, rape, sentenced to 1 year each in the penitentiary; George Kusman, larceny, sentenced to 1 to 20 years in the penitentiary by Judge John Prystalski.

Schuyler Pierson, 18 years old, who testified on Thursday as a state's witness at the murder trial of his former pal, Varner Corry, 17 years old, who shot Policeman Edward Smith on Memorial day, 1931, in the John Marshall High school, was recalled yesterday as a witness for the defense.

Assistant State's Attorney Charles J. Mueller closed the case for the state shortly after noon and Defense Attorney James Burke questioned young Pierson for the purpose of showing that Corry had been influenced by attending movies depicting gangster activities and by reading novels of a similar nature.

Recalls Gangster Movie.

Pierson could remember the name of only one movie he had attended with Corry, "Little Cæsar." He said he had loaned Corry a copy of a book entitled "Put on the Spot," but did not know whether Corry had read it or not. At the conclusion of this testimony the trial was adjourned until Monday by Judge Thomas J. Lynch.

Earlier in the day Prosecutor Mueller questioned policemen of the Fillmore station who talked to Corry after his arrest on the night of the slaying.

Caught in Swimming Pool.

Corry killed Policeman Smith when the latter surprised the youth in the swimming pool of the high school building. Young Pierson and Corry's younger brother, Earl, were present at the time. At the first trial, heard without a jury by Judge Joseph Sabath, Corry was sentenced to serve 18 years in prison. This verdict was later reversed by the state Supreme court.

Orders Filing of Briefs for H. O. Stone Officials

Attorneys representing five former officials of the defunct H. O. Stone & Co., who were sentenced to twenty years in prison each for using the mails to defraud, were ordered yesterday by the United States Circuit Court of Appeals to file briefs in support of their contention that gross errors were committed in the trial before Federal Judge Charles E. Woodward. The attorneys are seeking bail for the five men, all of whom are in the county jail.

WOMAN KILLED BY AUTOMOBILE; ARREST BROKER

An unidentified woman about 55 years old was killed by an automobile last night in front of 1025 North La Salle street. Joseph Patton Jr., 33 years old, 421 Melrose street, a broker with offices at 120 South La Salle street, the driver, was arrested by the East Chicago avenue police.

This death increased the Cook county automobile toll for 1933 to 46.

A motorist crashed into a light post in Chicago avenue, Evanston, near Calvary cemetery, on Wednesday. The post was overturned and the driver went on.

Later Policeman Kenneth Dickinson of the Evanston accident prevention bureau examined the post and found nearby a piece of an automobile fender which he traced to Philip Burnham, 22 years old, 536 Roslyn road, Kenilworth, son of the late Claude Burnham, who was vice president of the Burlington railroad.

Burnham, who is employed by the Emergency Relief commission, was arrested on charges of damaging city property and leaving the scene of an accident.

YES, MR. VOLPE ADMITS, HE IS A RACKETEER

Anthony (Mops) Volpe, 43 years old, a holdover from the gang leadership of Al Capone, is frank.

Arrested yesterday by Detective Sergeant Martin Healy at Kedzie and Ogden avenues, he was taken to the police showup and described by Lieut. Charles Gratian as Public Enemy No. 18 on the new police list of hoodlums.

"You have been arrested more times than you have fingers and toes, haven't you?" asked the lieutenant.

"Yes," replied Volpe.

"You are a well known gangster and racketeer?"

"That's true, too," admitted the prisoner with a smile.

No identifications of Volpe were made and he was to be charged with disorderly conduct and released on bond.

FILIPINO LEADER DEMANDS EARLY VOTE ON LIBERTY

Quezon, Head of Senate, Behind Move.

MANILA, P. I., Jan. 20.—(AP)—Manuel Quezon, president of the Philippine senate and for many years leader of Filipino agitation for immediate independence, was reported today to favor a vote with little delay on the acceptance or rejection of insular freedom in about twelve years, as provided in a bill passed by congress Tuesday.

The report was circulated after Quezon held a caucus with other senators. Plans Quezon had made for a trip to the United States were said to have been abandoned. He was reported to favor early recall of the independence mission sent to Washington and legislative action on the freedom measure soon after the arrival of the mission here.

Although Quezon and other senators were reticent regarding the caucus, it was widely reported Quezon had proposed permitting decision on acceptance or rejection of independence to be made by a national convention, instead of by the legislature which already is committed to rejection.

A caucus of house members to act on the altered plans is expected to be held, possibly tomorrow. Previously Quezon announced he would sail for Washington March 11.

The supreme council of the Philippine Civic union issued a statement today condemning the independence act passed by congress, but saying it believed "the time for the proposed boycott of American products has not yet come" in view of the possibility of rejection of the act by the insular legislature.

A number of extremist advocates of enrly independence are members of the council, including the former resident commissioner at Washington, Isauro Gabaldon, and Bishop Gregorio Aglipay, head of the Independent Catholic church.

DES PLAINES REDS ARE AWAITED BY POLICE TODAY

Des Plaines police are prepared today to break up any communistic demonstration which might be attempted in the village.

This was announced last night by Police Chief Chris Wegner following reports that some 3,000 radicals were planning a parade in the town, to start at 2 o'clock this afternoon.

Chief Wegner was instructed by the village president, Charles Hammerl, to issue no parade permit and to break up an attempted parade. The chief consequently asked for help from the county highway police, and this was promised. He also procured two dozen tear gas bombs and five riot guns.

GIRLS SELL AUTO FOR VALISE FULL OF SOVIET CASH

See Russians Flee Volga Area for Turkestan.

Conditions as they actually are in Russia were observed by the author and Mary L. De Give, both of Atlanta, Ga., in a motor trip through the soviet realm last summer and fall. In this, the seventh of ten articles she has written for The Tribune, Miss Christensen tells more of the discomforts of travel in southern Russia.

BY ALVA CHRISTENSEN.

[Copyright: 1933: By The Chicago Tribune.]

Returning from our excursion into Armenia, we reached Tiflis again on Sept. 28. We had barely 25 rubles left and we telegraphed to Moscow for help in getting money. We had plenty of American dollars, but we didn't relish the idea of trading them for rubles at 51 cents each when the ruble actually is worth less than 2 cents.

Several days later we heard that the money had been sent by lightning telegraph. Just ordinary telegraph messages are a little slower than mail. A fast wire takes two or three days, but lightning telegraph takes only two to twenty-four hours.

Sale of Auto Illegal.

We were anxious to leave Tiflis, as we were tired of living 'on credit. Going to the telegraph office, we were told they had received the order to pay us 7,000 rubles, but wouldn't be able to get it from the bank for two days. Such a grand transaction seemed likely to wreck the Tiflis bank.

Also we had decided to sell our automobile, an illegal transaction. Still, an official of the Soyezkino trust offered to handle the sale. There were several offers. The hotel manager, a plain clothes G. P. U. man, offered us 500 good American dollars for it. But we knew a sale to private parties would get us into trouble and we refused.

There were several offers in rubles. The Georgian Sovnarcom [council of people's commissars] would give us, they said, what we paid for it. We figured it all up and demanded 18,000 rubles, or $900 at the rate of 20 rubles to the dollar. Soviet mechanics had not done the car any good and we had already completed all but 200 miles of our projected motor trip.

Get $900 for Car.

We had deposited $600 at the border to guarantee that we would take the car back with us. This $600 had been refunded through influence in Moscow, but we had been told it was an agreement we should not sell the flivver. Still, we could not see that we were doing anything wrong in selling to a governmental agency.

On the morning of Oct. 10 we received 18,000 rubles which had been freshly printed for the occasion and a letter from the Sovnarcom stating that Mary L. had sold the car to them. This letter, they assured us, would be sufficient to cancel Beckie the flivver's visa in her passport. It took a suitcase to carry our 18,000 new rubles and the 7,000 wornout rubles which we had finally received from the bank.

At the Sovnarcom we asked for a letter of permission to travel in Turkestan. Officials guaranteed us that no letter of the sort was needed because free travel was now allowed in Turkestan. On the strength of that and a letter from the manager of Intourist, saying we were foreign newspaper correspondents, we departed that night for Baku.

Coach Lost En Route.

We had purchased international railway car tickets for the Batum-Tiflis-Baku train. At the station that night the train arrived only two hours late from Batum, and we discovered the international car had been lost en route.

At the station no one could tell us if it would be possible to locate another international car for Baku. However, the railway men did, and we left Tiflis four hours late.

Reaching Baku about eight hours behind schedule, we rode in a droshky to the only hotel, the Intourist, and after great trouble were given a room at midnight. We ordered tickets for the boat to Krasnovodsk for the next afternoon. Another bedbug fight ensued that night.

Our boat tickets were duly paid for and the ship was scheduled to sail at 4 o'clock on an 18 hour voyage across the Caspian sea. At 5 o'clock the information bureau at the pier didn't know if the boat had arrived. About midnight, becoming so exasperated with the dock hands because they were unable to give us any information, we succeeded in seeing the manager of the docks. He told us at 8 o'clock that the boat, a freighter, had not yet been unloaded. The crew, we were informed, did not know that they would take passengers over that day. At 2 a. m. we finally sailed.

Fleeing from Starvation.

There were four cabins on the boat. We secured one because we were foreigners. The other three were occupied by military men and their wives. The top deck and the corridors were swarming with masses of Russians, running away from the starvation of the Ukraine and the Volga regions to find happier homes in Turkestan. Many of them had read in the soviet papers of the wonderful things being completed in Krasnovodsk and others had received word from friends or relatives that living conditions were better there. They were fleeing from one horror of living into another.

After a 26 hour trip we arrived in Krasnovodsk on a bitter cold moonlight night. The town with its white buildings, white sand and howling, slinking skeletons of dogs, reminded us of a city of the dead. At the hotel we were informed that we could have no room. So I called upon the G. P. U. at 4:30 o'clock in the morning. When I returned to the hotel Mary I told me three Russians had been lured out of their beds to give us a room. We slept as well as the bedbugs would allow us.

During the day we strolled around town, looking for the new promised land that so many of the poor sufferers on the boat were trying to find. There was nothing. There was no food other than the fish caught in the Caspian. The one plentiful thing was a horrible stench everywhere.

The G. P. U. purchased our tickets for us and warned us that in Ashkabad there would be no food and they gave us tickets to their private dining room. We left Krasnovodsk in a hard car train. We slept, even though the benches were hard, until quite late in the day. Fortunately we had with us a couple of cans of Russian fish and were able to purchase watermelon and sheets of leathery bread en route. So we didn't quite starve.

At the hotel in Ashkabad there were no rooms. This time, however, we left our baggage at the hotel and drove around to the G. P. U. headquarters. We returned to the hotel and found that our luggage had already been placed in a room.

This same story seemed to be inevitable in every town in Russia. We ate our dinner in the private dining room of the Sovnarcom. For less than two rubles each we received well cooked, nicely grilled chickens, salads, shoestring potatoes, and pastries. That was our first introduction to the new strain of imperialism developing in soviet Russia.

Guest of Government.

Staying at the same hotel with us was a young colored radical writer, Ingston Hughes, who had been touring Turkestan with ten others of his race to study the national minorities question as it was being solved in Russia today. He was a guest of the government and was thoroughly enjoying life. We had met the others of his group in Baku. One of them laughingly told us:

"They think we're so dumb that just because they are nice to us and treat us royally that we should fall for their boasts."

Ashkabad is mentioned in the Intourist folder as "the city of love, famous for its cotton ginneries." It is a new Russian town of about fifty years of age. Therefore we could only see some of the new projects the soviets were putting through. We visited the only cotton gin in operation at that time and only half or possibly less of its equipment was in action. The director there was the only one we met who frankly admitted that his organization had not fulfilled its part of the five-year plan.

A SCENE OF ADVENTURE IN TOUR OF RUSSIA

The picture shows "Beckie," the flivver, being towed by the horses of Russian peasants after a piston had been broken when the car dropped off a ledge while fording the stream shown in the background. This was only one of many adventures experienced by Miss Alva Christensen and Miss Mary L. De Give of Atlanta, Ga., during their fourteen weeks' tour of Russia.

1857 PAWN TICKET FOR GRANT'S WATCH AND CHAIN FOUND

Springfield, Ill., Jan. 20.—(AP)—Six years before U. S. Grant became commanding general of the Union armies during the civil war and 11 years before he was elected President, he pawned his watch and chain for $22 in St. Louis two days before Christmas in 1857, it was revealed today.

The historic pawn ticket document was unearthed in the files of the Illinois State Historical library by Paul M. Angle, librarian.

Grant at that time was in desperate financial straits. After serving in the Mexican war he had been stationed on the Pacific coast, but had resigned his commission. In July, 1854, almost penniless and discouraged he joined his family in St. Louis.

During the six years he lived there he tried his hand at various occupations, being unsuccessful, history records, in all. From St. Louis Grant moved to Galena, Ill., where he was a clerk in a leather goods store operated by his brother. When the war broke out he came to Springfield and was placed in the adjutant general's office.

BANDITS HOLD UP WINNETKA CARD PARTY; GET $100

North shore police were on the lookout yesterday for two young bandits who late Thursday night invaded the home of Wirt Farley, former candy company executive, at 870 Bryant avenue, Winnetka, broke up a bridge party, and held up Mr. Farley, his wife and ten guests. Winnetka police suppressed news of the crime and last night professed to know nothing about it, although Mr. Farley made a complete report immediately after the holdup.

The gunmen obtained $100 in cash. They ignored several thousands of dollars in jewelry worn by the women. Both men were about 19 years old, seedily attired, and very nervous. They lined the Farleys and the bridge guests against a wall and searched them, taking only money.

The guests held up, all residents of Winnetka, were Mr. and Mrs. C. D. Masters, 439 Walnut street; Mr. and Mrs. H. D. Hill, 1005 Westmoor road; Mr. and Mrs. William Joyce, 801 Walden road; Mr. and Mrs. F. R. Byrum, 791 Walden road, and Mr. and Mrs. P. W. Greene, 1086 Laurel avenue. All the men are business men.

In May, 1930, three masked bandits held Mr. and Mrs. Farley captive in their home and robbed them of $10,000 in jewelry. In that robbery Mr. Farley was slugged.

DECEIVES HUSBAND; HE ACCEPTS ADOPTED INFANT AS HIS OWN

Detroit, Mich., Jan. 20.—(AP)—A 24 year old wife admitted tonight that she had deceived her husband into accepting an adopted baby as his own son.

She is Mrs. Harriet Edna Knapp who was sued for divorce today by Patrolman Charles F. Knapp. The husband made the deception one of the bases of his suit, but said he would adopt the child.

Mrs. Knapp said tonight that love for children and her realization that she could not have a child of her own led to the hoax.

"I had planned to tell my husband about it some day," she said. "I thought I would wait until he had become fond of the baby. I figured that after he had grown to love the youngster he would forgive me and wouldn't want to part with him. He does love the baby. I'm sure of that."

SPAIN DEMANDS SATISFACTION FOR SLAYING IN CUBA

HAVANA, Jan. 20.—(AP)—A note in the name of the Spanish government protesting "most energetically" the slaying here Sunday night of young Mariano Gonzalez Gutierrez, a Spanish citizen, was delivered today to the Cuban government by Rafael Forns, Spanish chargé d'affaires. Señor Forns asked Secretary of State Ferrera for guarantees for the safety of 450,000 Spanish nationals living in Cuba.

The note demanded criminal prosecution of the policemen who are alleged to have killed the 20 year old student after torturing him, reserved the right to ask indemnification, asked unqualified guarantees for other Spaniards, and announced Spain's intention to "have the matter cleared up."

Forns told Ferrara the Spanish embassy fully supports the Gonzalez Gutierrez family in asking exhumation of the corpse for another autopsy, to be conducted by physicians attached to the Spanish consulate and by Señor Forns, who is a doctor. If the family's request is not granted, he said, the embassy will make formal

SCHILDHAUER'S WIDOW NAMED IN $100,000 SUIT

Mrs. Frances Schildhauer, slain bandmaster's widow, and her mother, Mrs. Louise Birkinshaw, were sued for $100,000 damages in Circuit court yesterday by Miss Charlotte Holland. Attorney John Chapman, representing Miss Holland, said the suit will charge slander.

In the investigation of the killing of Edwin O. Schildhauer, bandmaster of the Austin High school, Police Capt. John Stege brought Mrs. Schildhauer and Miss Holland face to face. Miss Holland had told of an occasion when Schildhauer found his wife and Carl Bradberry, a former deputy sheriff, together in a bedroom clad in pajamas. Mrs. Schildhauer accused Miss Holland of having been a sweetheart of Schildhauer.

Mrs. Schildhauer had nothing to say yesterday regarding the suit. Her attorney, James M. Burke, said she would answer it.

Sixty Boxes of Dynamite Explode; Report 23 Dead

MEXICO CITY, Jan. 20.—(AP)—Twenty-three persons were reported killed and many injured in an explosion of 60 boxes of dynamite today at Morelia, about 125 miles northwest of Mexico City.

RUSSIA DECREES TAX ON FARMERS, PAYABLE IN GRAIN

Ends Old System; Hopes to Raise Production.

MOSCOW, Jan. 20.—(AP)—Vyacheslaff M. Molotoff, president of the Union Council of People's Commissars, and Joseph Stalin, leader of the Communist party, today issued a decree canceling the present grain collecting system and substituting a "tax" in kind.

Under this plan the kremlin expects to quell sluggishness of the peasantry which resulted in greatly reduced deliveries to the government in 1932 and a consequent serious food shortage for a large part of the population.

Sets Obligations in Advance.

The order, which had been expected for some time, gives the peasants the advantage of knowing in advance their obligations to the government, contrasted to the collection method under which the amount they were called on to deliver to the state depended on the actual size of the crop, and the more they produced the more the government took.

The decree fixes 1933 quotas from collectives and individuals in the form of a special tax, consisting of a percentage of the crop from each hectare [2.47 acres] calculated on the plan for spring sowing and the actual sown acreage of the previous winter crop, for which the government will pay the usual fixed prices.

The collectives were ordered to make deliveries every month, beginning in July and ending in December, ranging in amount from 3.3 per cent per hectare to .5 per cent for the different republics, depending upon fertility and mechanical facilities available.

Individual Quotas Heavier.

Rural officials were ordered to fix the quotas for individual peasants, who probably will be called upon to sell a proportionately larger amount to the state but who were given until Nov. 1 to complete deliveries.

On the basis of unofficial estimates the government formerly exacted approximately 30 per cent of the actual production of grain from the peasants. The new quotas were expected to be considerably lower, thus guaranteeing the peasants more for sale in the open market which they can continue under the new decree after fulfilling all obligations to the government and caring for their own needs.

Collectives failing to fill their quotas would be penalized by a fine at the open market price for the amount they failed to deliver, and individuals failing to meet their quota would be tried under the criminal code.

PRISONER SAVES THREE PLANE CRASH VICTIMS IN 40 DEG. BELOW ZERO

OTTAWA, Ont., Jan. 20.—(AP)—How a half breed prisoner who was being taken to trial on robbery charges saved the lives of his captor and two others in an airplane crash a week ago was told here today.

Corporal Graves of the royal Canadian mounted police was sent into the wilderness near Bay Trail, Sask., to get Buster Whiteway. On Jan. 13 Graves and the prisoner took off for The Pas in an airplane piloted by William Spence. Also in the plane were two other passengers.

At Moose Lake the plane ran into a blizzard, and the pilot decided to bring his machine down. One wing hit the treetops at great speed. The plane turned completely over.

Whiteway's ankle was broken. It was 40 degrees below zero. Crawling over the ice, Whiteway found that Spence was dead and the others unconscious. Painfully dragging the men out of the wreck, the prisoner laid them on elderdown covers and spread quilts over them to keep them from freezing to death. Then he crawled to an Indian settlement on the shore of Moose lake, and there obtained assistance.

U. C. PROFESSOR DIVORCES HIS BRITISH WIFE

Prof. Alfred R. Brown, lecturer and member of the department of anthropology at the University of Chicago, yesterday was granted a divorce by Superior Judge Joseph Sabath from Mrs. Winifred Marie Brown of Birmingham, England. Prof. Brown charged desertion, alleging that his wife refused to come to the United States with him in January, 1926. The suit was uncontested, but Mrs. Brown was represented by an attorney. The professor agreed to pay his wife 350 pounds a year alimony and provide 200 pounds a year for the support of his daughter, Cynthia, 18 years old, who is with her mother. The payments will total $1,842.50 a year at the present rate of exchange.

TEA TIME FINDS SCHOOL TOO BUSY TO DISCUSS FADS

Principal and Dean 'Can't Waste the Time.'

BY VIRGINIA GARDNER.

After presenting a request to see the school principal to a pretty clerk or secretary and waiting while she confers with another secretary, and then with the principal, a visitor was shown into the office of Principal Harry Keeler of Lindblom High school, 9130 South Lincoln avenue.

"I'm a very busy man," said Principal Keeler. "If you are looking for fads and frills in our school I can only say this: This is the age of the automobile. Would I not be foolish to come to school by horse and buggy? Just so, I think our least essential courses are 'reading, writing, and arithmetic.'

"I consider our most valuable courses those of music and art. I don't mean teaching a boy how to blow a horn—I mean providing a rich experience in music for that boy. The mechanic singing at his lathe—that is important. If he sings at his lathe he has a healthy mind."

"May I ask one question?" asked the visitor.

"Too Busy to Answer."

"No," said Principal Keeler. I have spent enough of my valuable time discussing my opinions on fads and frills. I am a very busy man. I can waste no more time."

Across the corridor some girl pupils were carrying out plates of cookies from a small room.

"Is this a classroom?" they were asked.

"No, this is where we keep our supplies for teas in the 'social room,'" one of them replied. "We're the only school in Chicago to have a social room. We give teas and receptions there and sometimes some of the girls' clubs get to meet there."

The "social room" was a large room adjacent to the office of the dean of girls, Miss Ethel E. Courtenay. Correct draperies and curtains were at the windows, oriental rugs were on the floor, a grand piano and easy chairs and tables stood about the spacious room. On two chests large brass samovars stood between brass candlesticks. A china cabinet held dainty china.

Dean Also Is Too Busy.

Miss Courtenay was sought for information, but she explained that she was too busy receiving girls at the "inter-cabinet tea" to attend to anything else. It was during school hours. One of the pupils from whom information was sought said that she thought all the furniture in the room was paid for out of money obtained from school entertainments and plays.

In the auditorium a class of girls and boys sat on the stage singing. It was a class called "opera." The class presents an opera in the school at the end of the term. Music and art are required subjects for all pupils of Lindblom, even those taking a technical course or a commercial course.

Physical education likewise is required for all courses, a full four year program for each pupil.

In Advanced Art Class.

In an advanced art class of fifteen girls and boys, which the instructor explained was her smallest class, the pupils were working on posters. Miss Mabel Williams, instructor, displayed some of the work they had completed, including Christmas cards printed from wood cuts. All were in the modern manner.

"This one here is very good," Miss Williams said. "You can't tell what it is, I suppose, but it symbolizes a man in high silk hat, plaid scarf, coat and shirt front, with a package in his hand."

Miss Williams has produced more than one national prize winner in poster contests.

On to Shops for Boys.

Down a couple of flights of stairs and into the shops for boys, where a four year technical course is given, another variety of things made with the hands may be seen. The shops are not compulsory for all students as they are in the junior high schools, where all boys must go through all the shops training.

The shops include a woodworking shop, foundry, machine shop, automobile machine shop, electrical shop, and printing shop, while mechanical drawing and machine freehand drawing also are taught.

In the electrical shop a large number of boys were clustered around an instructor who was reproducing Benjamin Franklin's experiment with electricity. In a small room adjacent to the classroom were seen heavy drawers from floor to ceiling where the electrical supplies are kept.

The huge machines were silent in the machine shop when it was visited. There were lathes, milling machines, planers. A veteran instructor displayed parts of machinery the boys had made, as well as finely turned silver jewelry, rings, bracelets and pins.

Instructors Use Machines.

In the blacksmith shop are huge machines used chiefly by instructors, and anvils where pupils pound metal. They make floor lamps, gate hooks, chains, chisels and lamp stands. In the woodshop many huge machines, bandsaw, jointer, circular saw and others, are for instructors only.

"The pupils first go in the wood shop," explained an instructor, "and there learn to make a wooden form of any piece of machinery. This is pattern making. Then in the foundry they take wooden patterns, put them in sand and dirt, remove them and in their place pour molten metal which they have melted in a great oven or over intense heat. In the machine shop they polish the castings.

"It is duplicating what Henry Ford does. The aim is to give these boys an appreciation of the labor and pains and workmanship that go into any manufactured product they buy. Also, it gives them hobbies to use in their leisure time. And by courses here a boy may find he is unsuited for a certain shop trade."

Boys in the electrical shop manage the lighting for school plays, assemblies, etc., which are features at Lindblom. Costumes for the plays are made by the costume making art classes. The electrical course is not intended to teach a trade, but acts as a lure to keep many boys in school who otherwise would not remain in high school, it is said.

INCOME TAX LAW AND DEMANDS ON YOU EXPLAINED

Below is the last of a series of ten concise articles on the income tax prepared for THE TRIBUNE. The articles explain provisions of the new income tax law, known as the revenue act of 1932, under which income tax returns are to be filed in March.

BY WILLIS NANCE.

Tax on Corporations.

Every corporation subject to taxation under the 1932 act, regardless of its income, is required to file a corporation return stating specifically the items of its gross income and the deductions and credits claimed.

In cases where receivers, trustees in bankruptcy, or assignees are operating the property or business of corporations, such persons are required to make returns for such corporations in the same manner and form as corporations are required to make returns.

The rate of tax on corporations has been increased from 12 per cent to 13¾ per cent under the new law, where a corporation files a separate return.

For the first time in the history of federal income taxation, congress, in the new revenue act, has imposed a penalty for the privilege of filing consolidated corporation returns.

If two or more corporations which are affiliated file a consolidated return of income, they must pay a tax on such income of 14½ per cent.

The definition of affiliation has not been changed in the 1932 act. However, a new provision prevents an insurance company from filing a consolidated return with any other type of corporation, or a life insurance company with another kind of insurance company.

The credit of $3,000 against the net income of a domestic corporation having a net income of $25,000 or less, which was allowed in the 1928 act, has been entirely omitted from the 1932 act, with the result that no specific credit whatever is allowed any domestic corporation against net income.

Dividends received by a corporation are not taxable if received from a corporation subject to tax under the 1932 act, but dividends distributed by a corporation not subject to tax under the law may not be deducted from the gross income of the corporation receiving them.

Another new provision contained in the 1932 act provides for the recognition of gain from the exchange or distribution of stock or securities with or to foreign corporations, unless prior to the exchange or distribution it is established to the satisfaction of the commissioner of internal revenue that the transaction is not in pursuance of a plan having as one of its principal purposes the avoidance of income tax.

Foreign corporations having an office or place of business in the United States must file returns at the same time as domestic corporations, but those foreign corporations not having any office or place of business in the United States are given until June 15 to file their returns

An interesting angle of the new tax legislation passed by the last congress, which applies to both corporations and individuals, is the law which provides that the government will only a pay rate of interest of 4 per cent on any overpayment of any internal revenue tax. In other words, the government pays only 4 per cent interest on refunds, while charging taxpayers a minimum of 6 per cent, and in some instances 12 per cent on underpayments of internal revenue taxes.

NORMAN, BRITISH FINANCE WIZARD, WEDS DIVORCEE

Bank of England Head 61 —His Bride Is 33.

BULLETIN.

LONDON, Jan. 21.—(AP)—Montagu Norman, governor of the Bank of England and the "mystery man" of world finance, was married to Mrs. Priscilla Worsthorne at the Chelsea district register office today.

BY EUGENE SPECK.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Jan. 20.—Montague Norman, governor of the Bank of England and mystery man of world finance, will marry Mrs. Priscilla Cecilia Maria Worsthorne, 33 year old divorcee, in the near future.

Mrs. Worsthorne gave notice to that effect at the Chelsea registry office just before it closed yesterday afternoon.

Grandfather an Earl.

Mrs. Worsthorne has been a member of the London county council for five years. She obtained a divorce four years ago from Alexander Louis Wynand-Koch Worsthorne. She is a daughter of the late Maj. Robert Reyntiens, who was aid-de-camp to the king of the Belgians, and a niece of Lord Fitzalan. Her grandfather was the late earl of Abingdon.

Norman is known the world over for his distaste for publicity and his efforts to escape it. He always travels under an assumed name, with his baggage marked "X." Although he was made governor of the Bank of England in 1920 and has held the office ever since, thereby establishing a record, he has allowed only two interviews, one consisting of "No," and the other, "Don't believe all you hear."

Criticized for Tactics.

Norman frequently has been criticized for his attempts to conceal his identity, notably during his visit to the United States last summer under the alias of "Prof. Clarence Skinner." He has boarded ocean liners in the channel from a bobbing tender for midnight conferences, he has appeared unexpectedly in London and mysteriously disappeared again, and he has employed every device known to keep his name and face out of the newspapers.

The bearded and debonair financier was reelected only a short time ago to the post he has held against countless attacks. He is charged or credited with having brought Great Britain back to the gold standard in 1925 and he is frequently described as the unseen hand behind the British government's financial policy. He has never denied nor substantiated anything said of him. He comes of a long line of bankers, his grandfather having been a director of the Bank of England for 50 years.

Woman Fatally Injured by I. C. Electric Train

Mrs. Cecelia Shaw, 21 years old, 1752 East 71st place, was fatally injured yesterday when she was struck by an Illinois Central electric train at 71st street and Stony Island avenue. She died in the Jackson Park hospital. Christ Nelson, 7224 Champlain avenue, a witness, told police that Mrs. Shaw was walking between the tracks on the right of way. The motorman, Nelson said, sounded the whistle as the train started away from the 71st street station. Apparently frightened by the whistle, Mrs. Shaw leaped and fell in front of the train, Nelson said.

DR. S. E. LELAND TELLS WHY HIGH TAX RATES FAIL

Explains Vanishing Point of Intangibles.

The assessment of billions of dollars worth of intangible personal property, advanced by the Association of Real Estate Taxpayers as a magic formula for relieving real estate owners of a large proportion of their tax burden, could never accomplish that relief, it was stated yesterday by Dr. Simeon E. Leland, newly appointed member of the state tax commission.

Dr. Leland, a professor of economics at the University of Chicago, has specialized in the study of taxation problems. In his expert opinion, application of a high tax rate to intangibles, by which is meant stocks, bonds, mortgages, and other paper evidences of credit, has two effects.

Tax Theory Fails to Work.

First, he says, it tends to decrease rather than increase the revenue obtained from such a source. Second, in a great many cases, Dr. Leland pointed out, the owner of intangible personal property which is subjected to a high tax rate merely passes the tax burden on to the owner of the real estate by which his evidence of debt is secured. The net result, in that case, is not to lighten, but to increase, the tax burden on real estate.

"Experience has shown," Dr. Leland said, "that you can't tax intangibles at high rates—that is, at the same rate applied to real estate. Most states have obtained more money by applying low rates to intangibles than they got by applying high rates to the same personal property."

Cites Baltimore's Experience.

As a classic example cited by tax scholars, he referred to the case of the city of Baltimore. In that city, when the tax rates on securities, mortgages and other intangible personal property ranged from 60 cents to $2 per $100 valuation, the taxes collected on this form of wealth totaled in one year $8,000,000. The following year the limitation of a maximum 47½ cent tax rate was set for intangibles. In that year tax collections on this class of personal property leaped to $58,000,000.

Perhaps the largest single item of intangible personal property in Cook county is that of real estate mortgages. Dr. Leland, in this connection, referred to one of his works on taxation in which he demonstrated that the holder of a mortgage almost inevitably either passes on the taxes on his mortgage to the owner of the property which it covers, or else withdraws his capital from the mortgage investment field.

Shows How Practice Works.

Dr. Leland assented in a general way to the following simplified illustration of the practice:

"A owns a building valued at $10,000. B owns a $5,000 mortgage on the building, at 6 per cent interest. A pays taxes on the property at the rate of 2½ per cent. B has not been paying taxes on his mortgage, but a reassessment of personal property lists his mortgage, on which he has to pay 2½ per cent taxes also.

"The following year, when the mortgage falls due, B tells A: 'See here, because of this new tax I'm only making 3½ per cent net on my investment. I can get that return by buying Liberty bonds, which are tax exempt.

"'Your mortgage isn't as safe as Liberty bonds. If you want it renewed you must pay me 8½ per cent interest so I can pay my tax and still net 6 per cent on my investment.' The net result is that A, who formerly paid 2½ per cent taxes on a building valued at $10,000, now has to pay, in interest and taxes, 2½ per cent on $15,000, comprising his original $10,000 building, plus a $5,000 piece of paper."

The field of personal property, of course, covers more than intangibles. It was pointed out by Dr. Leland. In addition there is tangible personal property—that is, physical objects.

"This must be divided into two classes, productive and nonproductive property," said Dr. Leland. "An example of productive personal property is the machines and tools which a manufacturer uses in his business. This class of property has a substantial taxpaying capacity. However, most of it is already on the assessment rolls.

"The item of nonproductive tangibles includes such things as household furniture and consumption goods in general. It may be taken as a measure of the individual's obligation to support the government, but only to a certain point. As we reach the higher income classes it is never a satisfactory measure of ability to pay. The only satisfactory index is a combination of wealth and income. However, assessment of this type of personal property would rarely lead to overtaxation."

Board's Powers Broad.

In discussion of the general activities of the state tax commission, Dr. Leland pointed out the broad powers given the body by statute. In addition to directing the work of local assessment officials, ordering necessary revision and equalization of their work and making assessments on the majority of railroad property in the state and upon certain classes of capital stock, the commission has broad authority for research and investigation.

Two of its powers, which the tax commission of Illinois has made little use of in the past, are "to formulate and recommend legislation for the improvement of the system of taxation of property and the equalization of taxation in the state," and "to investigate the tax system of other states and countries."

Under similar provisions of law, the tax commission of such states as New York, Wisconsin, Minnesota, and South Carolina have made wide researches and important recommendations for revision of the taxation systems of their respective states. In the opinion of Dr. Leland the Illinois commission should undertake similar activities, that its reports may become an authoritative source of information for legislators and citizens in general in dealing with the present revenue system of Illinois.

GIVE UP HUNT FOR MISSING HINKLER IN SWISS ALPS

LAUSANNE, Switzerland, Jan. 20.—(AP)—Capt. W. L. Hope and his companion, Lieut. Hinley, who have been searching for Bert Hinkler, missing 13 days on a solo flight from England to Australia, today gave up the quest because of snow and fog. After flying over the Valais region this afternoon without finding any trace of Hinkler, they said they would return to London.

Hope and Hinley themselves were reported missing for a few hours last night and early today, but later were located at Vetrox, in the Simplon valley, where they had landed yesterday and started a search afoot up Diablerets mountain.

French Flyer Safe.

PARIS, Jan. 20.—(AP)—A French army plane which had been reported missing after setting out from Oran, Algeria, to look for Lady Mary Bailey, British aviatrix, who was rescued from the desert yesterday, arrived at Colomb Bechar, Morocco, tonight, after making a forced landing because of motor trouble.

Mother in Ill Health Ends Life in Home

Mrs. Wilma Kuhs, 29 years old, shot and killed herself in her home at 2728 Arthington street yesterday. Her children, Shirley, 7 years old, and William, 2, were in another room at the time and heard the shots. Their cries attracted their father, William L. Kuhs, a manufacturer of false teeth, who was in his workshop near by. He told police his wife had been ill.

APPROVE PLAN TO PUT NEEDY ON RELIEF STAFF

Would Aid Investigation of Applicants.

The plan proposed by County Commissioner Walter LaBuy to place capable persons who are receiving poor relief in positions on the relief administrative staff, in order to investigate relief applicants more thoroughly, was approved by the public service committee of the county board yesterday.

The committee also approved a proposal by Commissioner Peter M. Kelly to have lawyers draft an affidavit, which all persons on the relief rolls and all future applicants for relief will be required to sign stating their resources and need for relief. Commissioner Kelly declared the affidavit system would facilitate prosecution of persons defrauding the relief organization and reduce attempts at fraud.

Prosecution for Fraud.

Commissioner Charles H. Weber won an amendment of Commissioner Kelly's motion on the affidavits to include the placing of signs in the relief stations stating that any applicant found to be receiving relief after an attempt to deceive will be prosecuted vigorously.

"I have the name of a man who drove a truck for the city for two years, and was on the relief rolls all that time," he said.

Sees 20 Per Cent Saving.

Commissioner LaBuy declared that his plan to increase the surveillance of persons on the relief rolls would cut the amount spent on relief by about 20 per cent, although it would involve a slightly greater expenditure at the outset. About 600 persons will be added to the administrative staff as case work assistants and clerical workers, he said.

Commissioner Marie Plumb suggested that the use of volunteer relief workers be investigated by Joseph L. Moss, director of the county bureau of public welfare, as a measure of reducing the cost of relief administration.

PRIVATE RECORD OF SEABURY QUIZ WILL BE BURNED

New York, Jan. 20.—The records of the long private examinations of thousands of witnesses which Samuel Seabury and his aids conducted in preparation for the public hearings of the joint legislative committee in its investigation of the city government will be burned, it was learned today.

The contents of most of these minutes are unknown even to members of the committee. During the course of the investigation, the counsel jealously guarded his private records, which frequently was demanded in the public hearings by Tammany members of the committee.

Their destruction, however, will be carried out pursuant to a resolution adopted unanimously by the committee. The resolution, passed at the last meeting of the committee, when the majority report was adopted, authorized the chairman, then Senator Samuel H. Hofstadter, to destroy all records of the committee which he deemed advisable. Mr. Hofstadter now is a justice of the Supreme court, and Assemblyman Hamilton F. Potter, as vice chairman, is acting chairman.

Assemblyman Potter has directed counsel to destroy the private records. This will have to be done before Feb. 1, when the committee ceases to exist.

JURY DISAGREES IN MURDER TRIAL.

Litchfield, Ill., Jan. 20.—(Special.)—For the second time a deadlocked jury resulted in the trial of Joe Chumley, 57, Coffeen blacksmith, for the murder of Joe Salatto, 25.

COUNTY BOARD THROWS OUT BIDS ON CHARITY COAL

Delays Action on New Specifications.

The public service committee of the county board postponed the adoption of new specifications for the charity coal contracts again yesterday, after voting to throw out all the bids received under its old specifications which, it was charged, restricted bidding to the southern Illinois field.

Commissioner Peter M. Kelly presented the new specifications, supposedly drafted by four of six experts, and approved by the joint administrative committee of the county board and the Illinois Emergency Relief commission. One of the four experts said to have approved them has since changed his opinion and now opposes them, leaving the experts divided, three and three.

Insist on Penalties.

"The relief commission feels the cheaper coal meets the needs of families on the relief rolls," Commissioner Kelly said. "They say these new specifications will provide that coal. Commissioner Busse and I inserted that a scale of penalties be added to assure the delivery of the contract fuel, and until they have been worked out we should not ask for new bids."

"I object," Commissioner Grace Fleming declared. "There is nothing official about this. We hear that Mr. J. J. Bennett, of the Illinois Central railroad, one of the six experts, now disapproves of the specifications. I insist that we have a full report from the three experts."

Experts Overlook Coal Sizes.

The specifications omitted stating the size of the coal, and the joint committee approved a size that would limit purchases to mines in central Illinois.

At an earlier meeting the finance committee adopted Commissioner Fleming's motion to instruct State's Attorney Courtney to investigate the charge that a cheaper grade than specified has been substituted for charity coal for the last 17 years in the county. The charge was made by Edward L. Ryerson Jr., chairman of the relief commission.

$500,000 COAST GUARD CUTTER ARRIVES HERE

The U. S. S. Escanaba, the new coast guard cutter built at a cost of $500,000 for patrol service in Lake Michigan, arrived in Chicago yesterday on an inspection trip from its home port in Grand Haven, Mich. The vessel, which is 165 feet long and displaces 1,001 tons, is commanded by Lieutenant Commander L. W. Perkins.

Mate Carl Howell of the Central coast guard station, put out in a boat with Warrant Officer Ralph Whitehouse to meet the new craft. Mr. Whitehouse piloted the Escanaba into port, the ship docking at the south side of the Navy pier.

The ship, which is an oil burner, is powered with two geared turbines developing 1,500 horsepower and has a speed of 15 knots. It is equipped to receive long and short wave radio calls and is manned by a crew of 58 men.

The cutter will return to its home port in four days, it was said. The government built the boat as a result of lake storms in 1929, which cost almost 100 lives.

Flossmoor Cut Rate Milk Dealer Beaten by Hoodlums

Fred Twretmayer, who has been selling milk at cut rate prices in Flossmoor and Homewood, was beaten by a gang of five hoodlums who dragged him from his automobile yesterday at 175th street, one mile west of Western avenue. The police learned that Twretmayer had taken 100 customers from drivers for established milk companies. He is employed on the farm of Dr. Roger Vaughan, a physician on the staff of the Cook County hospital, in Bremen township, near where the assault occurred.

PRINCESS SUES HER SISTER FOR LUDWIG'S HEART

WIENER NEUSTADT, Austria, Jan. 20.—(AP)—A lawsuit of Princess Alice del Prete, nee Bourbon, against her sister, Princess Beatrix, over the possession of the preserved heart of Ludwig XIV. and other valuables is causing a sensation in aristocratic circles here.

The valuables include the diamond necklace which Napoleon gave Archduchess Marie Louise and which was worn by Marie Antoinette when she was executed.

They were left to the princess by her brother, Don Jamie Bourbon, pretender to the Portuguese throne, who died in Paris last fall.

Masked Robbers Hold Up 6 Women in Hotel Lobby

Two masked gunmen yesterday lined up and robbed six women in the lobby of the Carolan apartment hotel, 5480 Cornell avenue, of jewelry valued at $1,350 and looted the hotel cash drawer of $40. Among the victims were Mrs. Oscar Meyer and Mrs. Franklin Kahn, both residents of the hotel.

BRAUN EXPLAINS AUTO TITLE PLAN TO GRAND JURY

AUTOMOBILE THEFTS.

Automobiles stolen, 84; recovered, 81; stripped, 12 [from police records for the twenty-four hour period ending at midnight Thursday].

Automobile case defendants: James Henry, sentenced to one year in the House of Correction and fined $200 and costs each on separate charges of tampering with a car and carrying a concealed weapon. James Bodker, John Kleny, Albert Liedtke, John Rokus, and Charles Zemke, sentenced to thirty days each and fined $1 as accessories in the theft of an auto. Martin Cosgrove and Thomas Calpin, sentenced to sixty days and fined $1 for larceny of a car. William Nixon, sentenced to thirty days for larceny of a car. John Kelly, held to the grand jury for larceny of an auto and receiving stolen property. All cases before Judge Harold P. O'Connell.

Attorney Joseph H. Braun of the Chicago Motor club appeared yesterday before the grand jury to explain his proposed state law for registration of automobile titles. He asserted passage of the law would bring a reduction of $2,000,000 a year in the amount of insurance premiums paid by Chicagoans by reducing automobile thefts and insurance rates.

Mr. Braun had been invited to appear in connection with the grand jury's investigation of the automobile theft situation. Following his talk the jury voted to send a recommendation for enactment of the new law to the legislature.

Another provision of the proposed statute will give the state stricter control of automobile dealers for the purpose of eliminating dealers who buy stolen parts. The law provides for licensing the dealers and requiring them to keep records of all parts bought or sold.

"How much work one box does!" says Mrs. F. W. Nelson of Grand Rapids, Mich.

"I THINK it's simply marvelous how much work I get from one large box of Rinso. A record I kept of one box shows that I washed all the woodwork once, the floor 3 times, tubs and sinks twice, the dishes 3 times a day for 8 days, and this washing for my family of 3:

2 bedspreads	9 doilies	2 pieces underwear
7 bureau scarfs	8 children's dresses	12 house-dresses
11 face cloths	2 children's nightclothes	7 aprons
8 pillow cases	2 pieces children's underwear
5 table-cloths	2 nightshirts
12 towels	8 shirts

Rinso's a very economical soap to use. A little gives a lot of thick, long-lasting suds—even in hardest water. Great in washers. Fine for dishwashing and all cleaning, too—and hands never get rough and red.

"The newspaper is an institution developed by modern civilization to present the news of the day, to foster commerce and industry, to inform and mold public opinion, and to furnish that check upon government which no constitution has ever been able to provide."

RAILROAD VS. AUTOMOBILE.

A few days ago THE TRIBUNE published an interview with Mr. Paul G. Hoffman. He told how the automobile has been improved in recent years in comfort, in speed, and in safety. To make his story more striking he contrasted the improvements made by automobile designers with the absence of improvements in railroad transportation.

To railroad men the interview must have read like a series of studied insults directed at exposing their incompetence, their backwardness, and their stupidity. Their trains are about as slow as they were twenty years ago. Their cars are as uncomfortable. Their engines are as dirty and noisy as ever. Their cars are as cumbersome. They drag ten tons of metal over the landscape for every passenger they carry. The locomotives waste power in vibration. Railroad engineering is in the hands of men promoted by seniority; young blood as designing automobiles and forcing improvements every year.

And so on. No doubt the railroads can make some sort of a reply, but in public opinion they lost the debate long ago. If railroad men wish to win back any of their lost business they will do so not by trying to defend an indefensible backwardness but by making the improvements that the public demands. The railroads will get rid of noise and dirt, they will put their cars on rubber tires, increase the speed of their trains, and improve the design and construction of their equipment.

The railroads need a complete metamorphosis. With passenger automobiles and trucks on the highways, at least 30 per cent of the trackage is redundant and ought to be liquidated. The attempt to earn a return on this superfluous equipment and the necessity of paying taxes on it have forced railroad rates so high that no profits can be earned, and accordingly no money is at hand for the wholesale rehabilitation of the railroads that alone can reëstablish their competitive position. As Mr. Hoffman said, the passenger equipment is all obsolete. The path of progress is clearly indicated by the new German express train which is mounted on rubber tires, is stream-lined to reduce air resistance, is built as lightly as safety will permit, and therefore operates at a speed higher than that of the automobile.

The passenger personnel of the railroads is living in the past. Trains dawdle through the country and are held for needlessly long periods in stations. The railroads, which already cannot compete with the automobile in short hauls and in vacation travel, seem destined to lose their long haul business to the airplane. The airplane designers are not marking time. They have developed commercial ships which can cruise at 185 miles an hour and, with the aid of slotted wings, can land at less than 50, promising immense gains in speed and safety of operation.

The traveler with a fresh eye sees evidences of the backwardness of railroad managements at every mile. He sees freight sidings spaced for wagon delivery when every one knows they should be designed to serve motor trucks. He sees altogether too many loading points though the spotting of cars on side tracks is slow and expensive and in these days of hard roads and motor trucks many fewer concentration points would cause no inconvenience and would serve to speed the movement of trains.

The railroads are confronted with a clear alternative. Either they must meet the new competition with new equipment and a rejuvenated personnel or the government will have to support the railroads with a dole. Sooner or later the dole will lead to government operation. Backward as railroad management is, it is infinitely preferable to government management. Therefore it is to be hoped that the railroads will find a way of liquidating their superfluous investment so that they can again become profitable. They must receive a fair reward in order to finance their modernization.

ANOTHER GOOD LAW GONE WRONG.

Some years ago Massachusetts adopted a compulsory insurance law for automobile drivers. Any one can buy and run an automobile and any one running an automobile can hit somebody or something with it and cause a lot of damage. The law required every driver to carry insurance so that the injured party could collect for the damage done him.

It was a good law in the sense that it was aimed at correcting an outrageous abuse and Illinois ought to make a similar provision. But if our legislature ever gets around to passing such a measure it is to be hoped that the experience of Massachusetts will not be overlooked. What has happened there was indicated in the recent inaugural message of Gov. Ely in the section in which he dealt with the clogged condition of the courts. He showed that 27,000 jury cases were entered in a single year and only 2,700 jury cases were decided. Three and a half years elapse between the filing of a jury case in the Boston area and the trial of it. Such delays play into the hands of some plaintiffs who are trying to shake down insurance companies and more especially into the hands of insurance companies seeking to avoid payments. Under these circumstances there is reason to question whether the abuse which the law was intended to correct has not actually been aggravated by the operation of the law.

The clogging of the court calendars has resulted in grave injustice to litigants who are seeking justice in cases which have nothing to do with automobile injuries. A law which was intended to provide relief to the victims of financially irresponsible automobile drivers but resulted in preventing the prompt collection of just debts of every other sort would be a poor law even if it operated admirably in the field of automobile injuries.

THE UNFINISHED SCHOOLS.

The board of education is finding it difficult to budget for the completion of a number of school buildings. These structures were started before the financial stringency became acute. Work on them was abandoned for lack of funds. In the opinion of competent architects the incompleted buildings, exposed as they are to the weather and to vandalism, are rapidly deteriorating. The community needs the additional seating capacity which these schools were intended to provide and, needless to say, the loss of the investment already made in the buildings ought to be avoided if it is at all possible to do so. On the other hand, it is doubtful if bonds can or should be sold to provide the needed money, and still more doubtful if the cost can be charged to taxation without undue hardship to the taxpayers or a sacrifice of some essential service of the schools.

There is one way out of this dilemma that should be explored. Today in Chicago there are tens of thousands of building mechanics who are out of work and on the charity rolls. They are being supported without any return to the community, and they are being supported by the taxpayers. Why cannot these men be put to work completing the schools for the taxpayers?

WHAT IS THIS, MR. MILLS?

Secretary of the Treasury Mills' five point program for recovery includes as point 4: "Removal of artificial barriers to trade." Is this an announcement that Mr. Mills has resigned from the Republican party or the even more important declaration that at least the right wing of the party, of which Mr. Mills is a leader, has turned Hamilton's picture to the wall and deserted the protective tariff?

No doubt in the speech from which the news dispatches thriftily lifted the five points Mr. Mills elaborated upon them and answered our query. But this benefited only Mr. Mills' hearers, and the rest of his fellow countrymen will remain in suspense until we are informed of the full scope and significance of the declaration.

Editorial of the Day

THE BEST PEOPLE.

[The Groton School Quarterly.]

PART II.

For five or six years, followed by three or four years of college, the amiable, naturally idealistic raw material of the best people was taught not to lie, not to place ends above means, not to play dirty ball, not to be unwilling to confess one self in error, not to cut corners across the rules of the game for the sake of victory—they were taught, indeed, in the more solemn moments of that education that mere victory is a pretty empty and shabby commodity, infinitely less preferable than honor, fairness, incorruptibility in the manner of striving for it. To be sure, the teachers of the young are almost everywhere held in less respect and demand than the athletic coaches of the young, and the athletic coaches, being in step with their times and a necessary part of the financial structure of higher education, are pretty thoroughly inoculated with the doctrine of victory for its own sake.

Far be it from us to argue for an athletic determination of American politics. The childish loyalties and bigotries and partisanship of our football seasons have not had much influence on the equally absurd and distasteful bigotries, loyalties, and partisanships of our political campaigns. The two spring from human nature. It is the business of the teachers of the young to alter human nature as profoundly and beneficially as possible. It is the sorrow and disillusion of the teachers of the young to see the pretty sugar coating of fair-mindedness which they have sprinkled over their charges blow off at the first whiff of elective office. Any one who would really rather be right and say what he thought than be President would be an animal so rare and strange that he would probably be locked up in a psychopathic ward long before he was nominated for the post of county dog catcher. He would also quite likely be the kind of human animal who could not stay long in any well conducted educational institution without getting into serious trouble.

No party machine could, of course, tolerate him—or he it. Very occasionally such a man does rise, or rather blast his way through party regularity into eminence. An examination of such cases will show that his education, or lack of it, has had very little to do with his qualities. An examination of the cases of those who, from a private school and a university, rose on the political ladder would show likewise that their educational advantages made no apparent difference; that they were as variously liberal, reactionary, fearless, time serving, narrow, greedy, selfless as any other group of men from any other background; that they were quite as ready as their supposed inferiors to think ill, speak ill of any man who happened to be playing on the opposing team.

The most hopeful view of the situation—which will have no solution in our lifetime—is that of an English scientist who, to give his readers a notion of man's past as compared with his future, asked them to stand at the base of Cleopatra's needle. Let the fifty feet of that ancient obelisk, he said, represent the great length of the geologic history of the earth—from the first fiery gas to ordered land and water. Then place upon the top of the obelisk a penny: its thickness is to the height of the needle what the life of mankind is to the life of the earth. And now lick a postage stamp and paste it upon the penny which is on top of the obelisk. The thickness of that stamp represents the length of man's recorded history. So much for the past.

The future? Barring collisions with other stars or planets, you can go on pasting stamps one on top of another until they reach the height of Mont Blanc. . . .

Teachers of the young, there is room for improvement. And plenty of time for it, too.

THE EARLY BIRDS.

A LINE O' TYPE OR TWO

Here to the Line, let the quips fall where they may. By R. R.

JOE'S BARBER SHOP.

Just off of Main street is a barber pole,
Known and revered by every village soul.
Bravely it stands, refurbished every May
In colors, patriotic, proud and gay,
Landmark and trademark, monument and prop
To Joe's endeared, enduring barber shop.

Enter the place it guards and symbolizes
With mystic runes, as well as advertises,—
A barber shop; but, somehow, different
From other barber shops. You catch the scent
Of lavender, instead of bergamot;
You see dim walls of gray; you wonder what Lies back of the partition in the rear,
In shadows quite mysterious and queer—
Salon of manicurist? Guess again!
A bathtub of rare checkered porcelain.
One of the town's most sacred institutions,
Where people once performed week-end ablutions.
A useless relic, now, for modern days
Have altered our ablutionary ways.

Upon the wall you see an ancient clock
That keeps the time, but boldly dares to mock
The times—a clever clock of curious wheels,
That, once a minute, faithfully reveals
The names, familiar once, of firms that passed;
By rival chain stores long ago outclassed.
But in one corner, near the cannon stove,
Is Barber Joe's most cherished treasure trove:
A set of walnut shelves from which there gleam
A score of private shaving mugs supreme.
Upon each mug is traced in gold a name,
Forgotten now, once known to local fame.
Like little tombstones, row on row, they stand,
Dusted each day by Joe's caressing hand,
The while he cons their legends, bold, that speak
Of customers of old who, thrice a week,
With jovial greetings, settled in his chair
For shaves; or sometimes let him cut their hair,—
Doc Lane, Squire Howell, Denny Blue, the clerk
At Silverstein's, who dropped in after work
To chat a while, and furtively to get
A peek into the pink Police Gazette . . .
Oh, friends of Joe's were all the town's elite
Back in the nineties! One could not complete
The Social Register and fail to call
Each name enrolled on mugs upon his wall.
Like little tombstones, now, those mugs proclaim
Their owners but a memory and a name.
An artist, Joe, who, more than forty years,
Sculptured, as one might say, with snipping shears
And rasping razor, as a pleasant duty,
To lend to physiognomies of beauty
A touch; although, perforce, one must admit
He sometimes made a sorry mess of it.
Sideburns he shaped; long beards that reached the waist;
Upturned mustaches, dyed to suit the taste . . .
Four chairs in those days; later, three; then two (The safety razor should have been taboo—
Joe says it's technocratic). The third chair
Survived till ladies ceased to bob their hair.

So now, in mathematic retrogression,
Two chairs alone are left to face depression.
Joe stands by one, and, by the other, Dan,
For thirty years his trusted second man;
And both are quiet, courtly, dignified,
And both have sensibilities and pride;
And neither talks, unless one draws him out,
And Dan grows thinner, while Joe grows more stout.
Dreaming together, vaguely and unvexed,
As who should wait the final call of "next,"
While on the curb—it is their totem pole
That bleeds, and pleads for every village soul.

WITH THE CIVIC GRAND OPERA in Chicago out of business, Mary Garden singing in the four a day, and opera around the globe hunting a new low, Tito Schipa is going to have his voice lifted from B flat to E flat. If we were a grand opera tenor right now we wouldn't give a whoop whether we sang in B flat or F minor. All we would want our voice to be able to do would be to make a noise like an auctioneer or a barker outside the side show. Those fellows seem to keep right on working.

NOW, AFTER ALL these years, we've got to memorize the name of Florencio Octavio Leopoldo Enrique Carlos Pedro Luis Joaquin Ramon Salvador Manuel Lorenzo Esteban Modesto José Boada y Marin. Florencio, etc., etc., a Cuban gentleman, gets on the front page because of his long name, which came into public view when he applied for a marriage license. That wonderful name enthralls us. When we were quite young we were captivated with the name of Gen. La Fayette—Marie Jean Paul Roch Yves Gilbert Motier, Marquis de La Fayette. We committed it rapturously to memory and when angry we would say it over three times before we spoke; if madder than all gittout we would say it nine times before we dared to tell the other fellow what we really thought of him. But now we're going to give Marie Jean Paul Roch Yves Gilbert Motier, Marquis de La Fayette the air. He's too short. In the future if anybody gets us all het up they mustn't think we are talking to ourself. No, but before we will trust ourself to speak we are running briefly over the name of Florencio Octavio Leopoldo Enrique Carlos Pedro Luis Joaquin Ramon Salvador Manuel Lorenzo Esteban Modesto José Boada y Marin.

THE PHILIPPINES are said to be all set to spurn the liberty that has been offered them by the U. S. A. Looking fixedly at these United States and the world in general, the opinion seems to be held by the Filipinos and the Virgin Islanders that this thing called liberty is awfully overrated.

STILL MORE TIC.

TRIFACIAL neuralgia is one of the most uncomfortable of all disorders. The pain is great and it radiates into all the lower half of the face, and sometimes above that zone. It causes aching of the teeth and jaws. Occasionally, spasmodic jerking of various face muscles is associated with it. It is apt to last for years, sometimes letting up for weeks or months, but returning just as one thinks he has lost it. Sometimes it hangs on day and night, winter and summer, in season and out.

In a considerable proportion of cases relief can be had from inhalation of a few drops of trichlorethylene. When Plesser suggested this method nearly twenty years ago he recommended a simple method of using it. Many have suggested modifications of the method, but none of the changes seem to be an improvement over the original.

Some 20 to 25 drops of the medicine are placed on a piece of gauze and held to the nose. After six to ten breaths of air have been drawn through the gauze the remedy will have evaporated and the vapor will have been carried to the membranes of the nose. No definite odor of the remedy can be detected on the gauze. This is repeated about four times daily. The medicine is absorbed by the nose membrane and, somehow, finds its ways to the nearby aching nerves, soothing their pains. If the pain is thus kept easy for a week or two it often disappears and sometimes does not return. In these cases it is a means of cure as well as a measure of relief. The vapor does not produce ordinary anesthesia or loss of sensation in the nose; it does not have constitutional effects—at least, not when used in this way and in small doses not often repeated, and it does not tend to cause a drug habit.

There are cases of tic douloureux, or trifacial neuralgia, which will not be relieved by trichlorethylene. Some of these are treated by injection of the gangliou of the large nerve. The substance injected, in nearly all cases, is alcohol. This drug is thrown directly into the nerve ganglion. The cure by alcohol injection may be only temporary. If, after having disappeared and stayed away for several months, the pain returns, the injection of alcohol may be repeated, or some other chemicals may be injected after the same fashion.

However, there is a likelihood that operation for the removal of the ganglion may be preferred in these obstinate cases. This is not a light operation and, even though it cures permanently, it will not be and it should not be lightly undertaken.

In some cases cure can be effected by far simpler procedures. For instance, a person has pyorrhea and is trying to hold on to some loosened teeth. He is suffering from trifacial neuralgia. Pulling the affected teeth may cure him. Or some other needed attention to the teeth may bring about a cure of the neuralgia. Or it may be there is a sinus that is the cause of the neuralgic pain.

BETTER KEEP IT.

1. Can a person live without a pancreas?

2. If the pancreas is involved in any way is it serious?

3. Can the pancreas be removed?

REPLY.

1. I don't think so.

2. The pancreas is a very important organ. Some very serious diseases are due to disorders of the pancreas. Since the question is indefinite, the answer must be that way also.

3. The pancreas is quite inaccessible surgically.

OWNER WILL TRIM.

Chicago, Jan. 16.—[Friend of the People.]—There is a large tree on our street and for years the branches have been hanging low over the sidewalk, making it necessary for even a short person to stoop when passing. It is thorny and of hard wood and during rainy weather very easily punctures umbrellas. In winter, when it is laden with heavy snow or ice, it is necessary to leave the sidewalk or crouch under the tree in danger of having an eye put out. I have never known the owner or tenant to do anything about this condition for the protection of the public. The tree stands just inside the sidewalk line.

J. R. R.

The above mentioned tree is on private property and not under the jurisdiction of the city. However, the owner has promised to trim the tree to remedy the conditions complained of. WALTER WRIGHT,
Supt. Parks, Reereation and Aviation.

PROPERTY LINES.

Chicago, Jan. 17.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—Years ago my father [for a consideration] gave each of his daughters a sixty-foot lot. The lot on which the homestead was built was the one next mine and the sister who took care of them was given the home. She in turn sold it, the buyer and she now being dead. The heirs have just informed me the house is built ten feet over on my lot and in order to have a clear deed they will give me $150. They accuse my sister of putting one over on their uncle and as such is the case I have no redress, etc. I'm sure had I known this I would not have been paying assessments for the past twenty years which amount to nearly $500. Have I any rights? Can I collect on the money I have spent on the ten feet? I. J. M.

If all the parties have dealt under a mistake as to the location of the line, then we see no basis for you to recover your excess tax payments if that is what you are interested in. You state no facts indicating that the sister was "putting one over." A diagram would help make your facts more clear. TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

JUDGMENT NOTE.

Fennimore, Wis., Jan. 10.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—I borrowed $475 from a bank and signed a judgment note. The bank went broke and was reorganized later. The new cashier asked me to pay the note, which [1] was not due, but I told him I would pay it as soon as I could get the money. He placed it in the hands of an attorney, who filed judgment. The note read [2] 15 per cent attorney's fee. [3] The cost of filing, he claims, was $21, and with the 15 per cent fee amounted to $93 [4]. which I paid. [5] Can a lawyer charge that amount by law without any proceeding of any kind but [6] filing judgment? [7] Do you think I can compel them to pay a part of the $93 back to me? C. W.

1. We assume that what you mean is that the written maturity date has not arrived, but that the judgment clause contained the common wording authorizing confession "at any time hereafter." Without such wording there would be no authority for judgment in advance of the due date.

2. This collection percentage would not be out of line if the wording justified it. We could answer your question to better advantage if the exact wording of the instrument were before us.

3. You could check this figure at the office of the clerk of the court.

4. If you intended to question the amount you should not have made the payment.

5. As we understand it, what he has done is to file a paper amounting to an ordinary complaint against you and also filing under authority of the judgment clause a confession and consent on your part that judgment may be entered. Where the facts justify the taking of the judgment the inclusion of agreed costs and fees is legal.

6. It was not a matter of merely filing See 5.

7. Probably not. See 4.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

LEGAL INTEREST.

Chicago, Jan. 17.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—1. What is the legal rate of interest a pawnbroker may charge? 2. Can he force one to pay 50 cents a month or refuse to surrender the article in pawn? 3. What steps should one take to redeem the article at the legal rate? M. C.

1. Three per cent per month.
2. Depends on the size of the loan.
3. Tender the legal amount, and, if it is refused, ask a police officer to accompany you to the shop.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

TRUCKING SERVICE.

Dixon, Ill., Jan. 16.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—If a farmer hires his stock trucked to Chicago or any farm products to market, having no interest in the truck, is he responsible for damages done by the truckster? The truck is owned by the other party. J. H. B.

If the farmer has no control of the details of the employment then the truckster would be regarded as an independent contractor and the farmer would not be liable. TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

FROM THE TRIBUNE'S COLUMNS

16 YEARS AGO TODAY

JANUARY 21, 1917.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Deportation of Belgian workmen to Germany is being carried out on a greater scale than hitherto, according to admissions in a memorial presented to the state department by Count von Bernstorff, the German ambassador. "Absolutely intolerable conditions" in Belgium are given as the reason for increasing tremendously the number of deportations. To state the facts and to demonstrate that deportation of idle Belgians was the only feasible means of dealing with a serious situation is the professed purpose of the memorial. It is asserted therein that the deportations not only are necessary but they are being carried out humanely and legally in promotion of the economic, mental, and moral well-being of the Belgian people.

LONDON.—A munitions plant blast last night in a suburban town, which rocked a portion of London, killed between fifty and sixty persons whose bodies have been recovered, seriously injured 121, and slightly hurt 265 others. The explosion leveled the factory, demolished three rows of nearby houses, besides causing other property damage. The chemical plant in which the munitions were manufactured was the center of a series of explosions, scattering destruction over a considerable section of the district in which the works were located. There is no evidence that the explosion was other than the result of a fire.

CHICAGO.—With the smile of a boy that has beamed at reunions of old friends, through big game hunting expeditions in the jungle, over wide stretches of water and land when the smoke of battle has clouded the air, and not long ago when he jumped into a story book and bought a whole pirates' island in tropical seas, John McCutcheon walked down the church aisle yesterday with his bride, just after their marriage. To right and left the two nodded at many friends in the pews. The bride was Miss Evelyn Shaw, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Van Doren Shaw of 1130 Lake Shore drive. The wedding took place in the Fourth Presbyterian church, with the Rev. John Timothy Stone officiating. More than 1,200 persons witnessed the ceremony.

WAR SUMMARY.—Berlin reports the capture by the Germanic armies of the town of Nanesti on the Sereth river in Rumania, together with a number of machine guns and ammunition. Petrograd reports gains made by the Russians at several points along the eastern front in Galicia. Berlin reports the repulse of British attacks near the river Ancre in France. One British, three Norwegian, and one Spanish steamer were sunk by submarines.

WASHINGTON.—Democrats in the house are engaged in rounding up votes to start impeachment proceedings against Representative Wood of Indiana, whose resolution was responsible for the start of the "leak" investigation. Representative Glass of Virginia is said to be the representative who is stirring up the talk of impeachment proceedings. Several other southerners have joined with him and it is probable that the resolution of impeachment will be presented to the house on Jan. 23. This resolution will charge that Mr. Wood is guilty of misconduct in office by making accusations and implying charges against certain members of the administration without first hand knowledge of the facts and with only hearsay and anonymous evidence to back up his charges.

CHICAGO.—Maj. W. W. Bell died at his residence, 4458 Drexel boulevard. He had lived in Chicago for sixty-one years. He was the son of the late Gen. J. Warren Bell and came to Chicago in 1855. Maj. Bell had been identified with large financial interests for fifty-three years. He was chief deputy collector of internal revenue in 1888 and later named and organized the National Bank of the Republic, serving as director and its first cashier.

ON THE CHARITY LIST.

Chicago, Jan. 9.—In answer to "Worried's" letter I would like to acquaint the party with a few facts.

They stated table luxuries were being bought with charity orders, and cigarets also.

I receive four dollars and a few cents a week for groceries, and a box of groceries once a month, for a family of four.

Now, the cheapest eggs are 37 cents a dozen, butter, 29 cents a pound, and as for the cigarets, no store is allowed to sell cigarets on a charity order.

It is all we can do to make it last, and we only have meat once a week.

Now, we don't see how "Worried" could begrudge us what we have to eat, when we live in constant worry of being thrown out in the street.

Give me a job at $10 a week and you can have my charity, for I asked for a job, not charity, when I asked for help four months ago. "Worried" stated they could just barely pay taxes on their home; I would be satisfied to be able to pay rent on one room.

There are people who don't need charity who are getting it, but they are few and should not be classified with the masses that really deserve it. L. B.

BEAUTY CULTURE DEFENDED.

Chicago, Dec. 18.—In reference to today's article, "Beauty Culture Adds a Frill to the School Bill," I wish to say th . to me and to many others you are most unfair in your attitude toward the technical subjects taught at Flower High school. As a graduate of Flower I can truthfully and knowingly say that these so-called fads and frills are the most practical subjects taught in the schools. Just as typing, stenography, and bookkeeping train girls for the future in the commercial world, so do personal hygiene, millinery, dietetics, child care, and other such subjects prepare girls for their future commercially. But the latter also have practical applications. I kn / that other Flower graduates will agree with me when I say that our technical training is or will be the most useful of all that we were taught.

After all, what good does knowledge do us if we cannot or do not use it? And what good are the schools if they do not teach us subjects which are useful to us? EVA BASARA.

REAR ADMIRAL BYRD'S PENSION.

Chicago, Jan. 15.—Would a brief comment by a veteran of two wars on your editorial "Rear Admiral Byrd's Pension" be in order?

Veterans' organizations never have contended that the admiral should not be compensated by a grateful government. But they do maintain that it is mighty poor taste for one drawing $4,200 a year for a twisted ankle to go about the country calumniating poor devils who draw a maximum of $600 for a body wracked by rheumatism.

And incidentally, did you ever have occasion to ask the price of one of the admiral's w. k. lectures, so popular during big money days?

HUNDRED YEAR OLD WISDOM.

Chicago, Jan. 12.—In connection with the celebration this year of Chicago's hundredth birthday, it is particularly interesting to read Mrs. John H. Kinzie's book, "Wau-Bun, the 'Early Day' of the Northwest," recounting her life and experiences in this city and general district from 1830 to 1832.

We have named the official celebration of Chicago's hundredth birthday "A Century of Progress," but as we read Mrs. Kinzie's story we wonder if all of our growth and change has been progress. Certainly she, a devout Christian woman, knew some fundamental truths we have forgotten. As of 1830 she writes of the complications of the whisky problem, particularly in connection with the Indian, and says:

> Where there is a demand [for whisky] there will always be a supply, let the legal prohibitions be what they may.

What a heavy toll of life, and what a saving of vast sums of the taxpayers' money would have been effected if this lesson from Mrs. Kinzie had not been forgotten. In these depressing times, as we celebrate our hundredth birthday, would it not be good for us to study the lives of our sturdy, hard headed, practical ancestors who made all that we enjoy today possible for us, and the forgetting of whose instructions has led us into so many ridiculous mistakes?

THIRD GENERATION, CHICAGO.

DIMINISHING RETURNS.

Chicago, Jan. 11.—Three illustrations how raising the tax rate produces less income:

1. Three cent postage. Field, Mandel, Carson-Pirie, et al. now have their delivery cars leave their monthly invoices at their charge account customers' doors first of each month.

2. Onwentsia New Year's celebraters mailed their invitations to a Dutch treat party in open envelopes—1½ cents postage.

3. A Christmas card fan this last Christmas printed his holiday greetings on government 1 cent postals.

All little matters—but there are millions of such retrenchments.

Net result: Instead of Uncle Santa Claus getting his 3 cent toll on all communications his rate is cut to 1 cent and 1½ cents, where it is paid at all; but in myriad cases his fee is cut out altogether.

Of course, first class mail advertising campaigns are more than half way abolished—probably nine-tenths abolished.

NO HUSBAND WILL.

Chicago, Jan. 7.—I bought a pair of the very sheerest chiffon silk hose over 6 months ago. They have been washed and worn over 50 times and still have no runs and are good enough for street wear as yet. These stockings only cost $1 (they were marked down from $1.35) and my only regret is that I did not observe the manufacturer's name. I wonder how many women will believe this.

DISMISS CHARGE OF MURDER AID, HALLORAN PLEA

Ruth Judd on Stand as Counsel Wrangle.

Phoenix, Ariz., Jan. 20.—(AP)—Superior Judge J. C. Niles, sitting as a committing magistrate, took under advisement tonight, pending final state argument, a motion to dismiss John J. Halloran from a charge of "being accessory to the crime of murder" in connection with the Winnie Ruth Judd case.

The motion to dismiss was presented by the wealthy lumberman's counsel as the state completed its case after four days of preliminary hearing, during the greater part of which time Mrs. Judd was on the witness stand relating her story of the slayings of Agnes Anne Leroi and Hedvig Samuelson.

The state's chief witness is under sentence to be hanged Feb. 17 for the murder of Mrs. Leroi.

Charged with Aiding Her.

Halloran was charged with having aided her in disposing of the body of Mrs. Leroi, of assisting and advising her to keep the slaying a secret, and to escape from Phoenix to Los Angeles.

The motion to dismiss was based on grounds of insufficient evidence, that the evidence did not tend to connect Halloran with any crime, that such evidence as was presented was "wholly uncorporated" and that by Mrs. Judd's own testimony the slayings were in self-defense, and hence not a crime.

The hearing involved itself today in a maze of legal technicalities which kept Mrs. Judd for the most part silent in the witness chair.

Mrs. Judd, the state's star witness, smiled cordially about the courtroom and frequently chuckled under her breath.

She Refuses to Answer.

She maintained that she has a constitutional right to refuse to answer questions concerning the placing of the bodies of the two slain women in trunks and hand luggage at her Brill street apartment, two days after the women were killed, and to decline to divulge contents of letters to her husband, written after the slayings.

Judge Niles, sitting as a committing magistrate, said: "Mrs. Judd is not a party to this case—she has claimed a constitutional privilege—the court feels inclined to honor it." He did not rule definitely on the matter, pending decision of Halloran's counsel as to whether further attempts will be made to reopen such questioning.

Frank O. Smith of the lumberman's counsel, informed the court he was prepared to show beyond doubt that "the witness now on the stand is of unsound mind."

Mrs. Judd's aged parents, the Rev. and Mrs. H. J. McKinnell of Darlington, Ind., were at hand today for the first time during the preliminary hearing. They are subpoenaed as defense witnesses. Both embraced Mrs. Judd in court before retiring to the witness room.

OPERATION ON THROAT OF TITO SCHIPA SAID TO BE SUCCESSFUL

Los Angeles, Cal., Jan. 20.—[Special.]—Tito Schipa, opera tenor, was reported resting easy, and in physical condition highly pleasing to his surgeons after a throat operation at Hollywood hospital this afternoon. Dr. Edward Kellogg performed the operation which was intended to correct a persistent tonsil trouble.

Dr. Kellogg said that an adjustment which was made in the epiglottal cavity might increase the singing range of the famous tenor from two to four tones in the upper register.

Schipa will not be able to fill any professional engagements for a month or more.

FORD IS SERVED WITH SUBPŒNA IN AUTO SUIT

To Testify Next Monday Before Notary.

Detroit, Mich., Jan. 20.—(AP)—For the first tim in many years, Henry Ford has been subpoenaed to testify in a legal action.

Information that the 69 year old magnate has been summoned to appear before a notary to give testimony in a suit involving his company came today from Wilfrid C. Leland, son of the founder of the Lincoln Motor company, purchased several years ago by Ford. Leland revealed that he personally had slipped unnoticed into an old fashioned dancing party at which Ford was a guest, and handed him the subpoena before he realized its nature. The Lincoln company was founded by the late Henry M. Leland.

How Suit Originated.

The suit, originally started by the Ford company against the Sweeten Automobile company of Philadelphia, is an outgrowth of six years of legal action, which involved the Sweeten company, Ford, and Leland. It grew out of the purchase of the Lincoln company by Ford, although it is a side issue in the purchase.

The Sweeten company, attorneys said, alleged it had lost several hundred thousand dollars when the Lincoln company failed to furnish cars to it as an agency, and put in claims for about $23,000. The company claimed Ford induced them to withdraw the claims, but that their sales contract later was canceled. Then, they alleged, the Ford company started suit to collect $6,300 in notes which it had given the old Lincoln company, and the Sweeten company filed a counter claim for $250,000. Since that time, nearly six years ago, the case has dragged through the courts.

In the subpoena, Ford was ordered to appear before Bertha D. Connolly, notary public, on Monday morning, to present testimony.

Served at Dance.

"The sheriff's office had the subpoena for weeks and couldn't serve it," said Leland today. "So, on Jan. 10, I took it to an old fashioned dance where Mr. Ford was a guest. I was received all right. During the evening Mr. Ford came and sat near me. I said, 'Good evening, Mr. Ford.'

"He must have mistaken me for somebody else, but he rose and extended his hand. As he did so, I slapped the subpoena into it.

"'Why, what's this?' Ford exclaimed. 'That, sir, is a subpoena in which your company is involved,' I said.

"'Take it back! Take it back!' Mr. Ford exclaimed as he stepped toward me.

"'I can't take it back,' I said, and then went on my way," Leland related.

17 STRIKE ON FEDERAL BUILDING JOB; 600 OTHERS MADE IDLE

Washington, D. C., Jan. 20.—(AP)—Seventeen men walked out on a strike today and 600 others had to stop work on the new postoffice department building.

The seventeen were hoisting engineers. Their strike made it impossible for stonemasons, bricklayers, and concrete workers to obtain materials on the upper floors of the structure. About 200 others whose work did not require material raised by the hoists continued work.

The strike was the outgrowth of a dispute between steamfitters and the hoisting engineers.

500 MINNESOTA TAXPAYERS ASK CUT IN EXPENSES

St. Paul, Minn., Jan. 20.—[Special.]—Warning that taxpayers are about to go on strike, more than 500 farmers and business men marched into the Minnesota capital today and demanded a 25 per cent reduction in state expenditures.

The group, representing 13 southeastern Minnesota counties, drove over ice coated highways to present their demands to Gov. Floyd B. Olson.

Headed by A. L. Sperry, Owatonna business leader, the group milled about corridors of the state capitol while awaiting an audience with the governor.

Admitted to the governor's office, Sperry read to Gov. Olson a message agreed upon at a meeting of representatives from the 13 counties.

The statement assured the governor that "we have come to help you ease the tax load upon every taxpayer in this state and not to criticize you."

Among other points in the statement were these:

"In many tax districts, especially rural, the state levy is over 20 per cent of the total levy."

"We protest this terrible cost of state government.

"Taxpayers are about to go on strike, and you must face this boldly.

"You have the power and the ability," concluded the statement. "Cut the cost of state government 25 per cent as your contribution to the general welfare."

TWO CONVICTED OF BERWYN BANK ROBBERY; 2 FREED

Two of four men accused of robbing the First American National Bank of Berwyn of $11,409 last March 3 were found guilty by a jury yesterday in the Criminal court of Judge Philip L. Sullivan. The other two defendants were acquitted.

Those convicted are Tony Digirolamo, 20 years old, who faces a term of from 1 year to life in the penitentiary for robbery, and Edward Lambert, 43 years old, who was convicted under the habitual criminal act and faces life imprisonment. Frank Eulo, 26 years old, and Edward Kerbeck, 33 years old, whose attorney, Roland Libonati, presented alibis accounting for their whereabouts at the time of the robbery, were acquitted.

All four defendants had been identified as the robbers by patrons and employes of the bank.

BOOKS

Tale of Brain Is Latest Novel by H. G. Wells

Book Pigeonholed Treatise on Chief Character.

BY FANNY BUTCHER.

"The Bulpington of Blup," by H. G. Wells. [Macmillan.] Published yesterday.

ON page 221 of Mr. Wells' latest novel of 414 pages, the author says: "Our story concerns the brain of Theodore and has no interest in describing the backgrounds of his experiences, except in so far as they changed the tenor of his mind." In that sentence the reader has the plans and specifications of "The Bulpington of Blup." In a treatise, nicely pigeonholed chronologically and emotionally, the mind of Theodore Bulpington [who later became, by his own invention Captain Blup-Bulpington] is biographed with as precise care as—perhaps with more precision than—M. Fabre biographed the caterpillar.

H. G. WELLS.

Mr. Wells sees his hero as a child in an intellectual household, with a father who was a great writer always about to write a great book and a mother who was a great talker always a little tamped down by her husband. Then as a boy meeting the two people who were to play a large part in his intellectual life, the son and daughter of an experimental scientist.

Then his adolescence [another pigeonhole] and the awakening of passion, and the contrast between his "profane" and his "sacred" love. Then [carefully labeled Theodore and Death] his hero meets death and intellectualizes his reactions to it. Finally, with the "Great Framework Cracks" Theodore goes through the phase of war surprise, inertia and final enlistment. During the war he is a coward who manages to think himself a hero. On his return his emotional scheme is shot to pieces. He becomes a dilletante of life and literature. He settles down into a life of spectacular lies. And there is the saga of Theodore Bulpington's mind.

Mr. Wells' superb gift for fiction betrays his design at times and Theodore, almost despite his author, comes alive as a human being instead of as an idea. Most of the early part of the book is real in that sense. It promises the reader the luxurious vitality of Mr. Wells' early novels, before his passion for ideas conquered his genius for telling stories. Ideas, for the first couple of hundred pages are not abstractions, but emanations from the living beings of the characters. Conversations are inevitably distilled from the minds of the conversers, not from abstractions. But as the novel progresses, the characters become lay figures for ideas, and the wholly rationalized plan of the book becomes evident.

Even before Mr. Wells tells his readers so, they suspect that the "story concerns the brain of Theodore and has no interest in describing the backgrounds of his experiences."

The title is the name which young Theodore Bulpington gave himself as a romantic youth, "The Bulpington of Blup." The Bulpington was the standard proper parfait knight" of great courage" whom every one admired and the chosen ones loved, who had brilliant adventures and never was tongue tied. How Theodore was able to achieve his Blupness is the theme of the book, and just how Bluppy that was gives ironic tone to the pages.

Mr. Wells used to be one of the greatest story tellers in the English language. He was nothing short of a genius in creating men and women who lived in every line of the chronicles of their lives. Then suddenly he became a propagandist. It doesn't matter whether propaganda is social or artistic or scientific, it's still pamphleteering and rarely is it high narrative art. Mr. Wells, pugnacious, was no longer Mr. Wells an incomparable novelist.

There is brilliant conversation in "The Bulpington of Blup," as there was in "The World of William Clissold." And that of all of Mr. Wells' sixty-odd books is the one that his latest novel most resembles. It could be "England and Theodore," instead of "The World and William Clissold."

BRIEF REVIEWS

BY M. D.

O. E. Rolvaag, who died recently, the author of "Giants in the Earth," which has been so often favorably compared with Knut Hamsun's "Growth of the Soil," epic saga of the earth and the earth's life, wrote "The Boat of Longing," which has just been published in translation. It tells the story of a young Norwegian boy, the only child of simple, honest fisherfolk who from his early youth feels the blind striving for beauty within him. His muted longing finds expression in music. His vision of finer and wider horizons takes him to America, where his experiences run the gamut of illusion and disillusion.

O. E. ROLVAAG.

The boat of longing is the symbol that is heard like a strain of music throughout the book. It is a shining boat, seen far out on the ocean, that lures restless people to a sublimation in death which they have not had in life. The book is written in a beautiful limpid poetic prose, with a mysticism and symbolism that are never lost in confusion or thematic contradictions.

Ursula Bloom writes in "Love, Old and New" [Dutton] the story of the Keyes family divided by years and tradition. The older boys, Burke and Jonathan, are a decade older than Shirley and Shane and fall in with the ways of their parents, willing to bow their heads to tyranny. Their experiences with love and careers are supervised by their elders, to whom they reveal all intimacies and comply to all demands.

The two younger children see life with the eyes of a new and fearless generation. They experiment with love and stumble along the roads of life, fighting for their independence. They make mistakes and suffer. Shirley finds happiness, but Shane does not fare so well.

Dr. Feuchtwanger Sees Machine as Agent of Cultural Victory

Through the contributions of the machine age man's cultural nature after several thousand years of conflict between his destructive and social nature is about to win. At least, that is the opinion of Dr. Lionel Feuchtwanger, German novelist, who arrived here yesterday from California. He spoke last night before the Book and Play club at the Standard club.

The author of "Power," "Success," and lately of "Josephus" said that in past ages man's instinct for self-preservation and the battle for food countermanded his cultural aspirations. But now the machine age, he said, has lessened the battle for a living and it "seems reasonable to suppose that man's social instinct is overcoming the destructive urge."

Philo Vance Returns After Long Absence

Detective Solves Another Baffling Murder.

BY MORTIMER QUICK.

After two years of silence and possibly meditation, Philo Vance is with us again. In "The Kennel Murder Case," by S. S. Van Dine [Scribner's], he pursues illusive clues in his usual allusive manner.

The story opens with old Archer Coe sitting cold and dead behind his locked bedroom door, locked on the inside at that. But even before the astute Mr. Vance arrives upon the scene there is an uneasy sense that this is not the simple suicide it appears to be. And it isn't. Nor is it the only murder that took place in the Coe house on that night.

Nobody really likes old Mr. Coe so anyone in the cast of characters conveniently set forth, as is Mr. Van Dine's habit, at the beginning of the book, might have done the killing if in some way he might have exuded from that locked room.

The clue which leads to the murderer is rather an engaging one, a little scotty which huddles wounded in a corner. So Mr. Van Dine tells you all about dogs and all about locking and unlocking doors from the wrong side and all about Chinese porcelain and even more than he has told you before about Regie cigarets.

A Chinaman crosses the scent and a lady with a lipstick. Altogether it's a very complicated story which leads in a wide circle from and then to the perpetrator of the crime. As a tip, I suggest that you form your conclusions early and then stick to them through thick and thin. In that way you will best enjoy the ingenious details of this story, in which Philo Vance is given every opportunity to display his uncanny powers of observation and astonish with his erudition.

In that erudition, I with mine, am about to pick some holes. If Mr. Van Dine, you have really seen and remembered the Monet paintings in the Salle Camondo at the Louvre, why do you spell the name of that superb collection of 19th century French paintings so erratically on page 276; and do you really think that anyone as intelligent as Philo Vance sets out to be would associate Kirmse etchings with Cezanne water colors and early Marins?

The White Cockatoo, by Mignon G. Eberhart [Crime club], is good. That ubiquitous nurse who was a sort of Murder Mary, inducing crime wherever she went, is absent from the pages of this new book and they are fresher for it. The scene is set in a wintry town in southern France, Avignon, I fancy, from the descriptions and more mysterious things happen in a ramshackle hotel than anyone but Mrs. Eberhart could well imagine.

Various reasons arise for suspecting various people, but I think you will be quite surprised at the denouement. The heroine is a nice girl and the hero an upstanding young man who is staunch though he has every reason to doubt her. They have a very trying time of it and your own excitement is such that you wonder how they ever lived through it. They almost don't but in the end the very plausible villain is very plausibly apprehended.

There are minor villains who add to the suspense and this seems to me a book that no reader can lay down with comfort until the end is reached. I commend it for a railway journey or flu convalescence. It is long, but every word and character is neatly woven into the plot.

Murder at Endor, by William Almon Wolff [Minton, Balch & Co.], is a straightforward story which moves through interesting events to an interesting conclusion. It has a nice convincing ring to it as if all the harrowing, but not too harrowing, incidents might actually have occurred to the very sort of people who live in its pages. Charlie Mitchell, a lieutenant of the New York homicide squad is an accessory but the nice young man who writes his own story helps to unravel the mystery. It is recommended for its sterling qualities, amusing detail and apt description of what really happens when you get arrested for a murder you didn't commit.

There is also a new Fletcher, "Murder of a Lawyer's Clerk" [Alfred A. Knopf], which will please the faithful readers of this prolific crimester.

London Takes to Anonymous Book Writing

"The Gold Falcon" Given High Praise.

BY FRANK SWINNERTON.

LONDON.—[Special correspondence.]—It is now the correct thing, in London, to publish your writings anonymously or under psuedonyms. This produces no hardship. It will be remembered that an association was formed in Paris recently which had as its object the publication of all books anonymously; but the present movement has nothing at all to do with that association. It is the result of personal preference. As for example, in the case of the author of "Peking Picnic", I understand that the author, Ann Bridge, is in reality the wife of Owen O'Malley of the British foreign office.

ANN BRIDGE.

The novel was written in the early mornings, and the author's first object was, not the entertainment of the world, but the loyal assistance of her husband. Another novel, to be published early in the year, and of remarkable quality, will have no author's name attached to it at all. Will the author's anonymity be pierced? I think it may.

This mysterious book is entitled "The Gold Falcon." It is Anglo-American in scene, is said to be full of portraits of living persons, very outspoken, very vivid, and obviously the work of an experienced writer of exceptional talent. The author is no novice. He is an Englishman. But his pictures of New York literary society are evidently first hand.

In my opinion, "The Gold Falcon" [the hero of which is a soldier airman] will cause a sensation on both sides of the Atlantic, for not only will its characters be scrutinized very sharply for recognizable traits but its denouement will be widely and deeply admired as one of the most original and powerful things in modern fiction.

The book is very well written, with great fire and actuality. It may offend a number of readers. But it will only offend them if they think they see themselves in its pages; and it will certainly cause talk. Even the publishers, in London, do not know the name of the author, but have accepted the book on its merits; and the story of various episodes in the history of the manuscript would in itself provide material for a very amusing novel.

Several books about individual cats have lately been published, one of them by Miss Norah James, the novelist, and another by Mrs. Dora Greville, the daughter-in-law of Lady Warwick, "the Socialist countess."

Mrs. Greville's cat is known as "Mr. Niggs," and his history is a really remarkable one. It is told in full in "The Diary of Mr. Niggs," which is illustrated by Aubrey Hammond.

THE COLOURED DOME
By Francis Stuart
Author of "Pigeon Irish"

THE same "prose like beaten gold", the same "strange mysticism which could only come out of Ireland", the same gripping drama and suspense which has carried Stuart swiftly to the front ranks of contemporary writers.

"A remarkable novel . . . This man Stuart is a blessed writer and more exciting than the whole Fianna Fail . . . His people are people of universal portent, his hero is a symbol to move all men." —William Soskin (N. Y. Eve Post)

"The important thing is that this young Irish novelist has dramatized an idea . . . It may be that he is only for the few. But for them he will be an almost inexpressibly precious discovery. —N. Y. Times

Stanza of "America" in Hand of Author Shown at Exhibition

The first stanza of the song, "America," written out and signed in Chicago by the author, S. F. Smith, on stationery of the Forty club; 35 Mark Twain letters, manuscripts and rare editions; a "private and confidential" White House letter in the hand of Theodore Roosevelt, a presentation copy of Dickens' "Nicholas Nickelby" to his sister, and other rarities, 248 in all, are to be exhibited in room 919 of the Fine Arts building, starting this morning. The exhibit will continue, except Sunday, until next Wednesday evening, when the collection, assembled from three different libraries, will be put on sale by the Chicago Book and Art Auctions, Inc.

On display with the other unusual items is the critic, James Gibbons Huneker's personal copy of Theodore Dreiser's "The Genius," with Huneker's penciled comments on more than 100 pages. The comments are generally uncomplimentary. Specimen notations on the margin are "Idiot," "Ass," "Twaddle," "He was not a genius—only a slob."

Tell Progress of Zoological Society's Work

Officers Are Elected at Annual Meeting.

Reports on finances and building progress were made at the annual meeting of the Chicago Zoölogical society at the Palmer house yesterday. John T. McCutcheon was reelected president, although he was not present. John T. Pirie was reelected vice president and presided at the meeting. John P. Kellogg was elected trustee to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Mrs. Edith Rockefeller McCormick. Stanley Field, James Simpson, and Frank Hibbard were made trustees for another five years.

A report was submitted by Ezra Warner, chairman of the finance committee, showing a net balance in the treasury on Dec. 31 last of $97,027. This includes so-called society funds, made up of membership sales, and all commitments on pending contracts. This would carry the project until about Sept. 1 next, according to Mr. Warner.

Amounts which may be received during 1933 in the way of the society's share of taxes prior to and including 1932 are listed as $82,776, collected but not yet turned over to the board, and $327,876 remaining to be collected if total taxes are paid.

Stanley Field, chairman of the building committee, reported that no new work had been undertaken on the zoo project at Brookfield during the last four months. The insect and parakeet house is completed and fully paid for at a final cost of $95,896. The pachyderm house is complete at a cost of $251,122. Large barless enclosures will be built for the elephants in the area to the south of the building, Mr. Field said, and on the north there will be two panoramas, one for African forms of wild life and one for animals of Indian origin.

Work is proceeding on Australia house and on bird lake, as well as landscaping around the buildings. Obligations on outstanding contracts amount to $175,243. Many important buildings, such as the antelope house and the large primate house, remain to be built. The cost of the project in the original budget was $3,880,358. Up to Dec. 31 there had been expended $2,227,515. The sum of $378,659 was received during the year from the forest preserve district.

Emmett Whealan, president of the county board, who is also a trustee of the zoölogical society, said that the money collected by the county and which was due the society under the percentage allowed by law would soon be paid. The delay was caused, he explained, by the necessity of retiring bonds of the forest preserve district. The district now has about $200,000 in the treasury, he said.

Good Morning!

This is charming, really!

Light, romantic, melodious; abounding in gay, clean humor, clever dialogue, tender sadness, "Tonight Is Ours" sends memory winging back to delicious, rainy days spent in the attic with apples and a story book.

The picture is an adaptation of Noel Coward's play (is Noel Coward a smart man or is be a smart man), "The Queen Was in the Parlor," and the tale it tells keeps you happily suspenseful from intriguing start to a finale you've hoped for and, this being the sort of movie it is, expected. The cast is peopled with delightful folks—cast your eye over it and call me a name with four letters if it isn't—the musical score is tuneful, and Stuart Walker has accorded the piece the sort of direction it cried for.

You follow the adventures of the Princess Nadya of Kryla, who (incognito) meets at a ball and falls in love with a chap named Sabien Pastal. Their romance is just about to end—or, should I say begin?—in marriage when one General Krish arrives and summons the runaway princess back to duty. The king and the crown prince have been killed. She must return and rule her restless, revolutionary people.

A sad little woman writes a note of farewell to love and happiness—and the scene shifts from Paris to the mythological kingdom of Kryla.

Next thing you know, the poor darling is about to be led to the altar by one Prince Keri—nice chap, but, alas, she doesn't love him!—who, for diplomatic reasons, has been assigned as her spouse. . . .

Now, I'd be telling more of the story than I should were I to relate the various happenings that lead up to that eminently satisfactory ending before mentioned. So—I go into the silence re further disclosures.

But, believe me!—Claudete Colbert was never more beautiful, more appealing; Fredric March never had a rôle more nicely calculated to make feminine hearts do funny leaps and bounds; Paul Cavanaugh was never more polished, manly, interesting than as Prince Keri, who, like Nadya, is reconciled to sacrificing his heart's desire to his country's need, and Alison Skipworth and Arthur Byron never showed up to better advantage than as the prince's aunt and the general. The last two have, of course, played in more important rôles, but they are shining lights wherever you put them.

The picture is charmingly staged and costumed. In fine, "Tonight Is Ours" is captivatingly refreshing entertainment for the whole family.

See you tomorrow!

Brewster Art Collection Is Shown at Home

Benefit for Society That Aids Schools.

BY JUDITH CASS.

FRIENDS of the Chicago Public School Art society who roamed through the handsome town house of the Walter S. Brewsters at 2704 Lake View avenue yesterday paused for more than a minute before the splendid portrait of Mr. Brewster that hangs above the marble mantel in the dining room. A liberal minded man, was their frequent comment, to dedicate three perfectly good days of home life to the cause of education.

And this is exactly what Mrs. Brewster has been thinking the last several weeks as she has been formulating plans to exhibit the notable collection of nineteenth and twentieth century French paintings she and Mr. Brewster have assembled.

Yesterday the doors of the distinguished house which David Adler designed for Abram Poole two or three decades ago, and which the Brewsters have occupied the last nine years, were thrown open at 11 o'clock and from that hour on until 6 in the evening Mrs. Brewster received guests who had been invited and who had not. For, as she explained, it has been impossible for the art society to know all who are interested, so any one is welcome. Today the house with all of its treasures will be open the same hours and then again tomorrow.

Mrs. Brewster Enjoys Day.

"I am sure I am enjoying this quite as much as any one else," Mrs. Brewster, looking lovelier than ever in a dress of soft blue crêpe, remarked during the course of the afternoon yesterday. "It is amazing how many new things friends help you to find in a painting or drawing. It is truly an interesting and refreshing experience.

To judge by the spontaneous exclamations of the several hundred persons who filed in and out during the afternoon, it doesn't seem possible that Mrs. Brewster could have enjoyed the day half as much as her guests. They stopped in the reception hall to admire the pleasant fountain hiding behind cyclamen and ivy, paused on the velvet carpeted stair to look at the works of Renoir and Matisse, and again in the two storied salon with its skylight of glass to study the large Pruna in delicate shades of peach and blue and silver.

Here in this gallery, almost devoid of furnishings, are some of the Brewsters' finest paintings by Mary Cassat, Picasso, Manet, Cezanne, Rousseau, and Toulouse Lautrec. And here is also one of the delicately carved ship models that the Brewsters' young son, Edward, collects with so much interest.

The dining room opens off this salon to the left, the drawing room to the right. In the dining room, handsome in tones of green and purple, is the collection of copies of the paintings the Public School Art society has placed in schoolrooms throughout the city—among them some stunning Gauguins, Van Goghs, and Franz Marcs.

Whistler Paintings in Drawing Room.

Paintings by Whistler, three ceremonial masks made of primitive wood 200 years ago by natives of the Ivory Coast of Africa, and the profile of a woman done by Pedro Pruna and dated 1904 (Miss Constance Hasler aptly remarked it might well be dated 1933) are particular points of interest in the drawing room. Here there also hangs a large oil by Gauguin, Mr. Brewster's pride and joy.

As one of the officers of the Public School Art society remarked yesterday,

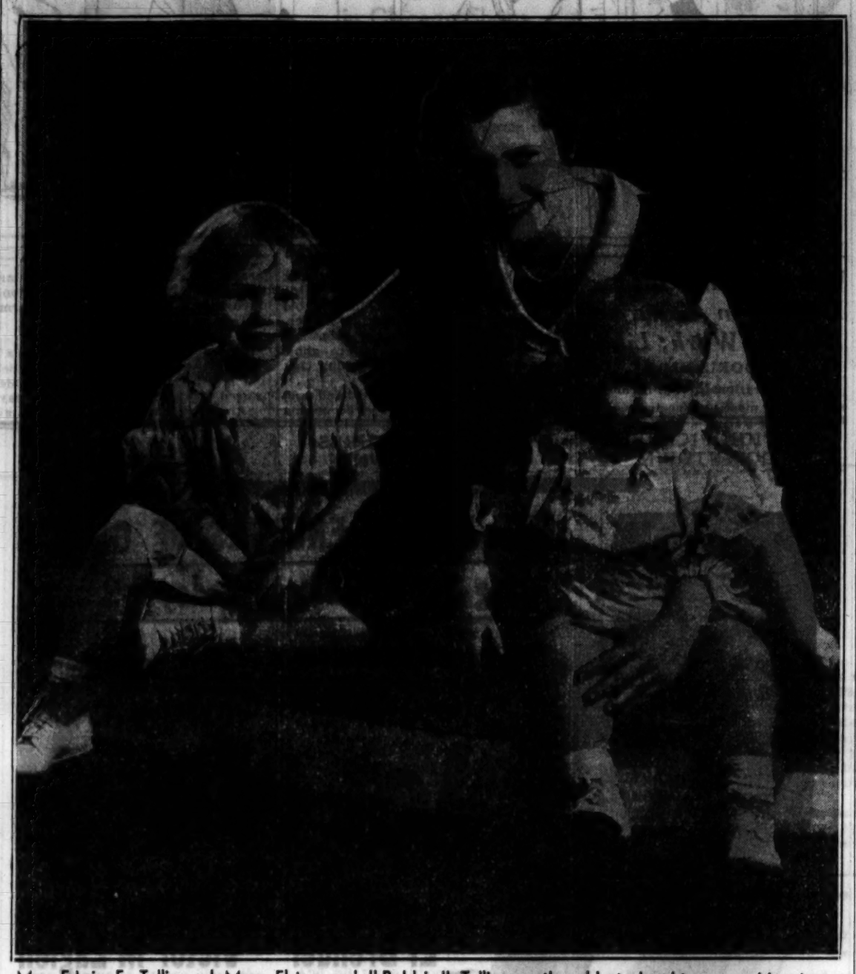
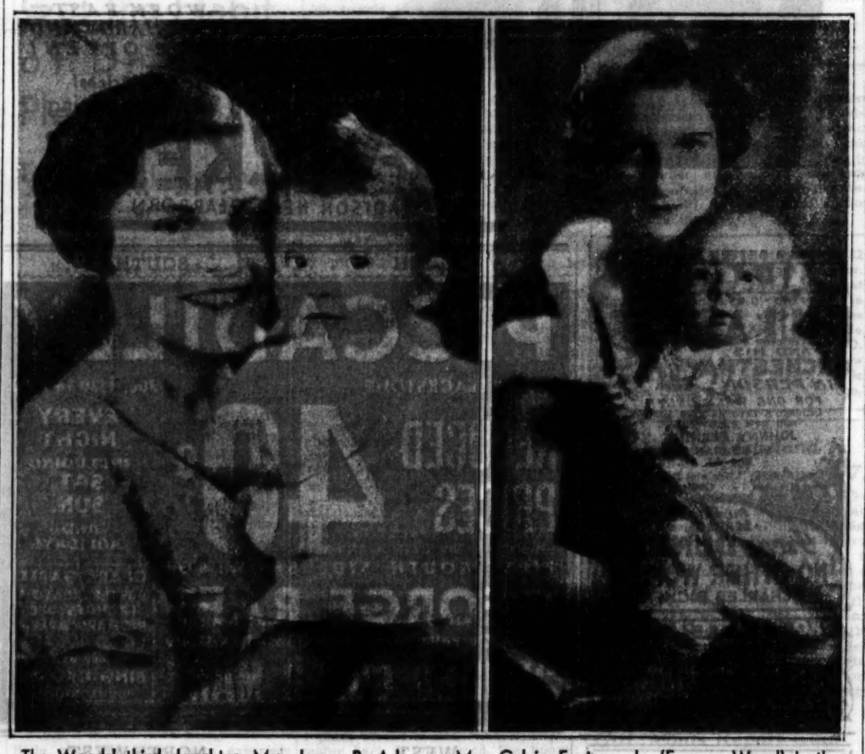
Grandchildren of the Robert E. Woods



Mrs. Edwin E. Tullis and Mary Elston and "Robbie" Tullis are the eldest daughter, granddaughter and grandson of Gen. and Mrs. Robert E. Wood of Highland Park. Mrs. Tullis is the former Anne Wood and she and Mr. Tullis and their little family live in Lake Forest, near enough to the Woods so that Gen. and Mrs. Wood can see the children often. There are 3 married daughters in the Wood family and one unmarried, Mary, who is at school at Farmington, and one son, Robert W. Wood II., who is following in his father's footsteps by going to West Point. [Koehne Photos.]



The Woods' third daughter, Mrs. James R. Addington (Sarah Wood) and her baby son, Keene, and Mr. Addington are spending the winter with Mrs. Addington's parents in Highland Park. Keene is named for his paternal grandfather, the late Keene H. Addington of Chicago and Lake Forest.

Mrs. Calvin Fentress Jr. (Frances Wood) is the second daughter of the Robert E. Woods. She is the mother of one baby, a daughter, Audrey. The young Fentresses are living this winter with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Calvin Fentress, in Hubbard Woods, so they, too, are fairly near neighbors of the Woods.

Chicago Women Will Welcome Mrs. Roosevelt to City Today

Future First Lady of America to Speak at Meeting Sponsored by League of Women Voters.

BY KATHLEEN McLAUGHLIN.

ELABORATE preparations have been made for the reception of Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, wife of the President elect, who will arrive in Chicago this afternoon. She will lecture tonight in Orchestra hall under the auspices of the Illinois League of Women Voters.

A squadron of ten airplanes is scheduled to take the air here at 3 p. m. with the expectation of meeting the United Air Lines plane on which Mrs. Roosevelt is to travel over northern Indiana. One of the planes will carry radio telephone equipment and an announcer. City and county officials will be among the passengers.

Mrs. Ralph B. Treadway, president of the sponsoring organization, will head the large reception committee that will greet the visitor at the airport at 3:45 o'clock. Mrs. Frank P. Hixon, chairman of the committee in charge of arrangements for the event, will accompany her, with 46 other members of the league.

Mrs. Elizabeth A. Conkey, national Democratic committeewoman for Illinois, is expected to head a delegation of well known women of that party affiliation to join the official hostesses in extending a welcome to the city.

A police escort will guard Mrs. Roosevelt and her party from the airport into Chicago and to the Drake hotel, where she will stay.

Expect Capacity Audience

Miss Jane Addams of Hull house will introduce the guest of the evening before what is expected to be a capacity audience at Orchestra hall. Mrs. Roosevelt's talk on "Politics and Young People" will be heard by hundreds of prominent Chicagoans. The last of the box seats were sold more than a week ago. The lecture is to start at 8:30.

A reception also has been planned by the League of Women Voters, to be held in the lobby following Mrs. Roosevelt's address. Mrs. Kellogg Fairbank, chairman of this feature, has on her committee the six vice presidents of the organization. They are Mrs. William Gold Hibbard, Mrs. Frank P. Hixon, Mrs. George Packard, Mrs. E. C. Schmidt, Miss Martha Sarver, and Mrs. Guy A. Tawney.

Will Return Home Tomorrow

Mrs. Roosevelt's tentative plans call for departure from the city by plane at 8:30 a. m. tomorrow, which would permit her to arrive in New York that afternoon.

Gov. Horner and Mayor Cermak have indicated that they will be in the audience at Orchestra hall, together with a group of other state and city officials.

Blocks of seats for the lecture have been reserved by the Women's Trade Union league and the Altrusa club, both of which claim the future first lady as a member of their New York branches.

Will Be Guest at Two Parties

Following her lecture Mrs. Roosevelt will be the guest of honor at a supper which Mr. and Mrs. Robert J. Dunham will give at their home, 1500 Lake Shore drive. About 50 Chicagoans have been invited.

Mr. and Mrs. James L. Houghteling, the latter a cousin of President Elect Roosevelt, will entertain with a small dinner at the Casino club before Mrs. Roosevelt's talk. Democratic leaders and several members of the League of Women Voters are among the guests who will meet the distinguished visitor at this affair.

New York Architects Take 3,000 Guests on Tour at Dance

New York, Jan. 20.—(AP)—The Beaux Arts architects used their legerdemain tonight to conjure up an ocean liner in the Grand ballroom of the Waldorf Astoria and some 3,000 sprightly merrymakers went for a "world cruise."

All the shimmering fun was part of the Beaux Arts ball, which is annually something of an event in these parts.

It wasn't, perhaps, as scintillant as balls of other years, when the architects have raided the treasure chests of antiquity for the old and startling in costumes and design. Recognizing current economics, the committee decreed that costumes might be as simple as the starched white of a deck steward or as elaborate as a temple dancer on Bali isle.

The navy blue mingled with jade as the dancers twirled beneath the lights, and even bathing suits were not taboo.

Simplicity was discarded, however, in the settings for the eighth episode world cruise. The vast gold and ivory ballroom was transformed to represent the French liner Ile de France and adjacent smaller rooms became sun decks, game decks, lounges, bars and what have you. On the lido deck was a 15,000 gallon swimming pool and bathing beauties. The French Line furnished authentic marine accoutrements.

With the flick of a magician's wand the episodes carried the voyagers to Morrocan sands, thence to Naples, domed Constantinople, through the Indian ocean to Bombay and Bali and through a China sea typhoon to Tahiti, the final port, where the monster cast went native by prearrangement.

The versatile Ben Ali Haggin prepared the scenario, while the architects themselves designed the bizarre settings.

Engaged

MISS LEONA GRACE THOMPSON

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Clay Thompson of 1472 Summerdale avenue announce the engagement of their daughter, Leona Grace, to Franklin H. Fisher, son of Mr. and Mrs. John J. Etges of Chicago.

MINUTE MYSTERY Can You Solve It?

BY H. A. RIPLEY.

[Copyright: 1933: By The Chicago Tribune.]

Dr. Fordney is professor of criminology at a famous university. His advice is often sought by the police of many cities when confronted with particularly baffling cases. This problem has been taken from his casebook covering hundreds of criminal investigations.

Try your wits on it! It takes but ONE MINUTE to read. Every fact and every clew necessary to its solution are in the story itself—and there is only one answer. How good a detective are you?

CLASS DAY.

"I've frequently told you chaps," said Prof. Fordney to his class, "that you must never take a witness' testimony for granted—never. Always, always examine closely his statements, even when there is no question of honesty.

"The following testimony at an inquest illustrates my point. Listen:

"'At 2:30 a. m. I was standing in front of the Hotel Senator on 6th avenue when I saw three men come out of the Smart Set night club directly across the street. They were followed out by two U. S. sailors. The three men had walked only a few steps when the gobs ran up and a fight started. I dashed across and just as I stepped up on the sidewalk one of the sailors pulled a gun from his hip pocket and fired twice. One of the three men dropped.'

"'Holding the small crowd which had collected at bay, the two sailors commanded a taxi and [illegible] I helped carry the wounded man back into the club and summoned the ambulance and police.' When the surgeon arrived he said the man was dead.

"'Yes, I can identify them: the street in front of the club was well lighted. One of the sailors was tall and blonde, and the one who did the shooting short and dark. The murderer is that man sitting right over there.'"

"And there," continued Fordney, putting down the paper, "you have an example of the unreliability of even an eyewitness."

WHAT DID THE PROFESSOR FIND WRONG IN THE STATEMENT OF THE WITNESS?

The above was submitted to Prof. Fordney by G. W. R. of Cleveland, O., for a Class Day problem. Perhaps you have one you would like the professor to try on his class. If so, send it to him in care of this paper. He will be delighted to see what his students make of it.

[See solution on page 27.]

Kenwood Service.

The Kenwood Social Service club will meet on Monday afternoon at the residence of Mrs. Benno F. Nell Jr. at 1042 East 48th street.

The part Chicago has played during the last nine months in the feeding of the hungry by the American Red Cross was told yesterday in the report of James B. Forgan Jr., chairman of the Chicago chapter.

"When congress authorized the farm board to turn over to the American Red Cross 85,000,000 bushels of wheat to be used for relief purposes, Chicago as the center of the wheat area was made the base of nation-wide operations," Mr. Forgan said.

"In the Chicago area alone the Chicago chapter has distributed 3,500 bushels of wheat, 140,097 barrels of flour, 840,000 pounds of cereal, with a valuation of $420,431. To prevent duplication and waste and to insure impartial administration the distribution was made only through family relief agencies accredited by the official relief agency of Illinois, the Emergency Relief commission."

From the Chicago base opened by the American Red Cross 6,215,500 barrels of flour have been distributed to practically every county in the United States, he said.

A Job a Day

Every little improvement we give our home right now helps us—and the other fellow too.

Examine our porch floor to see if it is sagging or showing signs of decay. Look underneath at joists: new supports may be needed. If there are any floor boards which are rotting, replace them. When the porch floor is rotting where it joins the house, make sure molding is water tight. If there is no molding have strips of quarter round applied. The joint may be weather-proofed by asphalt paint underneath. Have a good quality outside floor paint over the porch. Paint is a big protection and lengthens the life of wood. Watch carefully the base of your pillars, for there is a point decay that can set in rapidly and work unnoticed for a long time.

FOLLY ISLAND

By Wallace Irwin

SYNOPSIS.

Bart Burgess is marooned in a catboat on Pocomic bay, fifty miles from his Long Island home in Wyattville. His companion, Ingalls Frederick Warren, spoiled child of a new made fortune, known as "Nosey Ingy," rows over to a town for a carpenter. A girl in a red canoe comes along and invites Bart over to her family's island, but her small brother says their mother would have a fit. Bart senses a family secret. Ingy sends help and taxies home. Mr. Davis, the carpenter, tells Bart the Bayleys have lived on the island fifteen years, but don't mix. The father travels. While the boat is being fixed Bart goes over to the island with the girl, Alice Bayley. He invites her to visit in Wyattville.

INSTALLMENT VI.

YOUNG MANHOOD.

Something less than a week later Trevor Burgess was playing tennis on his Wyattville estate, giving a man half his age as good as he sent. But the set was never finished. Hearty old Trev, who had been shouting and joking up to that moment, dropped his racquet, clutched at his side and fell all in a heap. His only son was called suddenly from a lecture at Columbia Law school, but the father was dead before Bart reached home.

"Never had a sick day in my life." Bart Burgess, stupified at first by the brutal shock, remembered his father's boast. All these years Trevor Burgess had shown a bright face, let nothing daunt him; a steady man, but smiling. Even the petted half invalidism of his little wife he had met with his infallible sympathy and interest. But he must have had his moods. Bart, more than anybody else, appreciated that. There were the intervals when he had to be alone, to pack away somewhere with rod and gun. His family, his neighbors respected his maxim, "Sometimes it's a good thing to shake hands with yourself."

Now Bart was the head of the house, the strong man upon whom his mother must lean or die. Dear mother, her very weakness appealed to him as it had brightened the chivalry of her honorable, self-reliant husband. Now he must give her the strength of his shoulders, the courage of his heart to bring her back to the life which she wailingly rejected. Bart was a man now. Boyhood he had left behind him, a handful of pebbles strewn across Folly island to amuse a laughing girl in a red canoe.

Nature had made her striking with her lustrous yellow hair and large brown eyes; she had heightened the effect by a fiery green costume and a hat too small and too tilted for this conservative corner of Wyattville.

One afternoon, about ten days after the funeral, Bart lingered in his bedroom, a high Victorian space in the high Victorian house. Somewhat impatiently he was waiting for Mr. McClellan, the family lawyer, to finish talking with his mother. Idly he gazed at the enlarged photographs on the wall; pictures of himself at St. Paul's school, at Yale, at Columbia Law school. His eyes took in the old fashioned details of the room which his mother, fond curator of love, refused to have changed. He looked out the bay window, across the broad estate. The velvet lawns, the fancy trees and shrubs reminded him of dad. The good, simple hearted father—and with what gallant merriment he had faced life until its sudden end.

The responsibility of manhood was heavy in Bart Burgess at that moment. And with it came an unreasonable darkening of the spirit, a cold, unspoken prophecy. Wilfully the young man shook away the specter and summoned back the strength which dad would have been proud to see in him. But a sudden knock at the door caused him to jump. What was the matter with his nerves? After all, it was only old Ella, announcing Mrs. Sackett. Yes, Bart would be right down. And was Mr. McClellan staying for dinner?

"Yes, Mr. Burgess." Two weeks ago he had been only "Mr. Bart." "And Mrs. Burgess is having her tray upstairs."

Bart went down the hall, welcoming Lora Sackett's visit as a sort of comic relief, after all this waiting. A certain stodginess about the big, quiet house was getting on his nerves, and he was glad that Lora's faint kinship made her occasional visits proper in a mourning household.

He found her in a little back living room, a spot of color against the high, white panels. Nature had made her striking with her lustrous yellow hair and large, brown eyes, she had heightened the effect by a fiery green costume and a hat too small and too tilted for this conservative corner of Wyattville.

"O, Bart! How adorable of you!"

"Good gracious, Lora. Haven't seen you for days."

"Then you noticed it?" Dark eyes rolling twittingly. She was pretty, he decided again. She opened an enameled trifle, chose, lit, puffed. "Do you mind my style of smoke?" she asked, blowing vapors.

"What the deuce do you put in those things, anyway?"

"Menthol. Easy on the throat."

"It smells like a fire in a drug store." But Bart was glad she had come.

"For a boy of your age," she said, "you're hallishly rude." She had lifted a silver candy box from the table and was looking into it, a bee seeking honey. "I'm twenty-four, and so are you. But that makes me ages older."

"In what way, wise woman?"

"Experience."

Unexpectedly he wondered about Lora, who had always been flitting somewhere across his picture; even in the brief year of her marriage. Her mother, Mrs. Lind, was Mrs. Burgess' second cousin. Something like that. And with Bart, Lora had developed a trick of coming rapidly round to the personal. Her eyes could grow so hot with meaning; a shallow sort of burning, he thought.

"Where've you been all this time?" he asked.

"Philadelphia, Cousin Bart." Faintly sarcastic, this tag of kinship. But she sighed, "If all my relations were fascinating as you—I mean your mother, conceited— it wouldn't melt my bones, going to Philadelphia. Ever since I was knee high, mother has been threatening me with General and Mrs. Jacob Newell Farnham, just because they happen to be her cousins. Bad news, the horror has come to pass. I've seen them."

"Pretty dead fish?"

"Pickled in sacred oil. Ages ago they had a grief in the family —" She hesitated. Even heedless Lora could be tactful. But responsive to his "Go ahead," she resumed, "Their bad boy got too much Farnham, that's all They gave him the willies, so he ran wild and let a cop shoot him, or something. Since then they've taken their grief out in joining committees. Aunt Constance is a curse. I had to sit in the fireplace when I wanted to smoke. That's a visit you pay for through the nose."

Restless as a hawk, since her divorce, Lora never stayed put for long in her mother's cottage in Wyattville village.

"How's your mother?" she asked.

"All right. A lawyer's got her nailed this afternoon."

Lora's eyes sharpened for a moment, a trick of hers, then opened into soft, brown globes, like a gazelle's.

"And now you'll be the business man of the family, I suppose. Up at dawn, scalding yourself with coffee, catching the seven-fourteen; back again on the five-forty-nine, with a Wall street edition under your manly forearm and the wrath of God in your heart. Bart, I can't imagine it."

"Well, somebody's got to do it." He laughed stiffly.

Women Who Once Idled in Luxuries Now Work; Like It

BY DORIS BLAKE.

It's inspirational, the manner in which the "most unexpected woman" has taken up her new rôle following the decline and fall of fortunes. One met with recently was, in the old prosperity days a leader in a rich, excitement chasing group. Her big house is gone. Her cars are gone. So are her servants. Everything that smacked of luxury.

The woman with her husband and two boys, 11 and 13, are occupying garage quarters. Comfortable quarters, it is true. And they've done much with the place to give it charm. BUT—

It's the former "spoiled darling's" attitude toward her household duties that is a bright spot in a slightly depressed world. It goes without saying that Jane, we'll call her, does all her work. A market, a couple of years back, was a place you read about on the stock transaction page, to Jane. Today it's a place where she badgers for better measures, the freshest vegetables, and the more economical meat cuts.

"At first," Jane tells, "it was a game. I knew I had to do it to survive at all. Of course, I made the usual ridiculous mistakes. But after a bit it was no longer a game. It was a vocation. And, if I do say it myself, I set a better table right this minute than I ever had with servants running my house for me.

"I never dreamed there was such a field for study in foods, balanced diets, maintenance diets. I never knew how one could save on food by following the radio talks and the newspaper columns devoted to the subject. I'm right there with my little pencil at the radio—and it's more fun than a show working out new dishes that cost little."

There are, no doubt, a great many women engaged in doing the same thing.

Would Welcome Sewing Machine.

"I wonder if you could get me a sewing machine through your column? I need one badly and cannot afford to buy it. I am separated from my husband and have the sole support of my little daughter. MRS. L. J."

If you seldom use the sewing machine you have why don't you place it where it can be put to some good? Mrs. J. would be delighted to fall heir to it.

BEAUTY ANSWERS

If there is any question pertaining to beauty and personal hygiene upon which you wish advice write to Antoinette Donnelly, The Chicago Tribune. Enclose stamped, addressed envelope for personal reply.

G. M.: EXERCISE WILL REDUCE the fleshy hips, but if it's a case of being big boned there, a study of dress lines will help to "hide" the bonniness.

M. B.: THE VEGETABLE OIL shampoos are beneficial to hair that is lifeless and drab looking. For scalp stimulation make frequent use of the hairbrush. Massage with the finger tips is also recommended.

Brewster Art Collection Is Shown at Home

Benefit for Society That Aids Schools.

Mr. and Mrs. Brewster are opening their homes for this three day exhibit in such a generous and civic minded way because they believe so implicitly in the work of the society—that really good pictures in the schools (and this is what every $1.50 for admission will go to buy) have profound educational usefulness, while poor paintings and drawings set false standards difficult to eradicate.

Mrs. Brewster's daughter, Mrs. Duncan Hodges, in a bright green wool dress, assisted her mother yesterday morning. And so did Mrs. Shreve C. Badger, Mrs. W. H. Buhlig, and Mrs. Fauling Donnelley, smartly dressed in black. During the afternoon Mrs. Charles R. Lindsay III., looking stunning in gray with accents of brown and a tiny brown muff; Mrs. Charles H. Worcester, Mrs. Dallas B. Phemister, Mrs. Joseph T. Ryerson, and Mrs John Paul Welling helped Mrs. Brewster to receive. Mrs. Edward L. Hasler, Mrs. Herbert P. McLaughlin, and Mrs. William R. Odell Jr. were among those who visited the exhibit yesterday.

Dinner Dance for Miss Carr.

Robert F. Carr will make the formal announcement of the engagement of his daughter, Miss Florence Carr, to Edgar Lewis Marston II. at a dinner dance at the Saddle and Cycle club tonight. About 150 friends of the young people will be there to offer their good wishes and to congratulate the young easterner on his good fortune in having won the beauteous and attractive Florence.

Mr. Marston's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Hunter S. Marston, arrive this morning to be present at the party. The Marstons are prominent in New York and Watch Hill, Mr. Marston being a son of the Edgar L. Marstons of New York and Los Angeles and Mrs. Marston a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Wyckoff Vanderhoef of New York.

Young Mr. Marston, who is his paternal grandfather's namesake, went to St. Mark's and then to Princeton before entering the University of Chicago to take a business course. He has been here ever since, having decided to engage in business in Chicago after he finished the course.

Miss Carr, the second of Mr. Carr's two daughters—the elder one, Louise, was married to William Press Hodgkins several years ago—went to Westover and then spent a year at Miss Risser's in Rome, coming home to make her debut in the summer of 1931. Her father gave a garden party at their Lake Forest residence in September and later in the season gave a dinner dance at the Casino. She was one of the outstanding debutantes of that year and is one of the most attractive young women in society. Her marriage to Mr. Marston is planned for April.

Announcement of the winner of the Friends of Music prize for the sale of the largest number of subscriptions to the Music temple to be erected on the lake front was postponed yesterday because of the slight illness of Mrs. Robert J. Dunham. The prize, a round trip to New York by airplane, will be awarded at a meeting next week.

Mrs. Waller Borden, one of the most active in the campaign of the Friends of Music, will speak this afternoon before the cooking school of the Boston store.

Officers of Athletic Club.

Mrs. Andrew B. MacCaughey has been elected president of the Woman's Athletic club and Mrs. William Sherman Hay is now first vice president, instead of second. Mrs. William Nelson Pelouze is second vice president and Mrs. Frank P. Graves is third.

Mrs. Raymond C. Dudley, who was the president last year, will be treasurer this coming year. Mrs. H. Newton Hudson is the new recording secretary, and Mrs. Stanley Zaring, last year's recording secretary, will be corresponding secretary this year.

The directors are Mrs. Alfred C. Eyler, Mrs. Henry Bartholomay, Mrs. Harry B. Clow, Mrs. Joseph O. Watkins, Mrs. George M. Reynolds, Mrs. Allan M. Clement, Mrs. William F. Peterson, and Mrs. George L. Cragg.

The first cards to go out in the name of the new corresponding secretary, who by the way, is in the south but will return in about three weeks, announces a morning musical on Friday, Jan. 27 at 11 o'clock at which Janet Fairbank, soprano, and Amy Neill, violinist, will give the program.

Mr. and Mrs. Howard W. Fenton will entertain about 75 of the debutante set at supper tomorrow night at their apartment, 209 Lake Shore drive, at an "au revoir" party for their daughter, Miss Honore White, who leaves on Feb. 5 to resume her studies at Vassar.

Miss White, one of the prettiest and most popular of this season's buds, took a leave of absence from her college career to be at home the first half of this year and enjoy her debutante season, so she will enter as a sophomore next month.

Margery Riach Bride Today.

When Miss Margery Riach becomes Mrs. Isaac Leonard Ellwood II. this afternoon she will cut her wedding cake with the sword carried by Mr. Ellwood's maternal grandfather, Henry Benjamin Guler, in the civil war. Mr. Ellwood is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Erwin Perry Ellwood of De Kalb and Lake Geneva.

Only the immediate families will attend the marriage ceremony to be solemnized at 4 o'clock at the home of Miss Riach's parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Murdoch Riach of 1022 Ridge avenue, Evanston, but a reception for several hundred relatives and guests will follow at the Evanston Woman's club.

Miss Riach is to wear the lace gown worn by her mother at her wedding and the tiny rosepoint cap that was her great-grandmother's.

Miss Patience Ellwood, sister of the bridegroom, will be Miss Riach's only attendant, and William Baker Jr. will serve as best man for Mr. Ellwood. Miss Riach has invited six of her intimate friends, Miss Jane Bradley, Miss Dorothy Dunham, Miss Jane Lawrence, Mrs. Burnham Fisk (Martha Seabury), Mrs. Lawrence Nelson Jr. (Suzanne Bradley), and Miss Jeanne Street, to assist at the reception.

The marriage of Miss Charlotte Eleanore Hinds, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William L. Hinds of Syracuse, N. Y., to Francis Mariotti Truman, son of Mr. and Mrs. Percival H. Truman of Evanston, will be solemnized this evening at the residence of the bride's parents in Syracuse. Miss Hinds will be attended by Miss Barbara Link, maid of honor; Miss Melanie Truman, bridesmaid, and Miss Mary Ann Crofut, flower girl.

Mrs. Vander Woude to Visit Wheelocks.

Mrs. R. Vander Woude, mother of Thomas Wheelock, is arriving in town this morning from St. Louis to be the guest of the Wheelocks over the week-end. Mrs. Vander Woude, who spends most of her time at her country estate, Eastridge, in Kent, England, has been visiting friends in Auburn, N. Y., and St. Louis since her arrival in this country Christmas eve. Mrs. Wheelock will postpone her party for Mrs. Vander Woude until she comes to Chicago for a longer visit the middle of February.

Mrs. John Wentworth, who remained in Paris after her husband and her mother-in-law, Mrs. Moses J. Wentworth, started for home at the conclusion of an 8 weeks' trip to Egypt and Europe, is expected to return to Chicago early next week.

Young Mrs. Wentworth has been away since early September on a round the world trip, and met her mother-in-law and husband in Paris in early December. With the Ralph Boalts of Winona, Minn., who accompanied young Mrs. Wentworth on the first part of her trip, all three Wentworths went to Egypt for the Christmas holidays.

The senior Mrs. Wentworth plans to spend most of the winter in her Lake Shore drive residence, which was redecorated during her absence.

Mrs. Donald M. Ryerson of Lake Forest sailed yesterday on the Georgic with Mrs. Amory Perkins and Mrs. Richard Ely Danielson of Boston to spend the remainder of the fox hunting season in Ireland.

John Hughes Goes to Ireland.

John E. Hughes of Lake Forest is to sail tonight from New York on the Bremen to spend the remainder of the fox hunting season in County Meath, Ireland, and Melton Mowbray, England. He went east on Wednesday to visit his son, John R., at the Groton school before sailing.

Ira Nelson Morris who is devoting so much of his time these days to the international radio forum, sails this morning on the Bremen for Europe. His departure is quite unexpected since friends here had anticipated his remaining in this country until at least the beginning of March. Mr. Morris will stay abroad through the spring.

Mr. and Mrs. William Jarvis Gibbs of River Forest, announce the engagement of their daughter, Susan Jane, to Frazier Samuel Wilson, son of Mr. and Mrs. William H. Wilson of Oak Park. Miss Gibbs attended the Fairmount school in Washington, D. C., and the University of Wisconsin. She is a member of Kappa Kappa Gamma sorority. Mr. Wilson is a graduate of the University of Illinois and a member of Chi Psi fraternity.

Lelong Combines Corduroy, Lace for Debutante

BY BETTINA BEDWELL.

PARIS.—[Special.]—Lucien Lelong takes the debutante and all the rest of the under twenties into serious consideration in making his advance spring collection. He has some of the prettiest youthful clothes that Paris has seen in many a day.

Daytime clothes for young girls in the Lelong collection are not grave garments made of such standbys as serge, but are gay and young and fanciful. He has dresses for the teens that are made of a new kind of wool lace, knitted like jersey and striped in lively colors. They are practical, just as much so as sadder materials, and do a lot more to make life young and attractive. Over these frocks he puts a jumper made of corduroy, and the result is something irresistible.

The frock pictured today is in this combination. It is made of wool lace striped in green, dark brown, and white. The stripes are worked vertically on skirt and blouse, and two pie-piece godets with the stripelike chevrons are set into the front of the skirt. The sleeves have long cuffs with the stripes running horizontally.

The corduroy jumper is green in color and has an Ascot scarf at the neck—a scarf that can be removed, leaving the plain round line shown in the background. The jumper has short raglan cut sleeves and fastens in front on three silver bars and an arrow head. The belt is brown suede fastened by silver rings.

Economical tips for week-end food shoppers—a new Saturday morning radio feature—will be presented weekly by Miss Meade over station W-G-N. Tune in at 9:45 today for Miss Meade's market chat.

BY MARY MEADE.

Why do hard cooked eggs crack and leak out?

How does one get rid of disagreeable odors in market chicken?

Should flour be "aged" before being used for bread?

What makes some gingerbread taste soapy?

These and many more queries like and unlike them came posting in this week to find place in today's question clinic.

First the question of Miss G. E. V. about cracking eggs. Eggs crack most frequently when taken right out of the refrigerator and put into boiling water. Just a little matter of physics—liquid within turning to steam and working up a pressure faster than it can be released through the pores of the shell. Another cause is careless lowering of eggs into the pan or boiling so briskly that the eggs bump themselves and crack.

Also, the larger the air cell in the end of the egg the more likely it is to crack. This cell is caused by evaporation of the water in the egg and frequently happens even to fresh eggs which are left for several days in the drying air of a mechanical refrigerator. The best way to handle this is to puncture the large end of the egg with a darning needle. For hard cooked eggs, start them in cold water, bring gradually to just below a boil and cook until of the desired firmness.

The second question, sent us by Mrs. B. S. H., asks for a method of getting rid of the intestinal odor of chickens.

This odor may be removed by washing out the chicken with sodawater, unless the chicken has been kept too long after it was drawn. If such is the case it should be returned, not used.

However, Mrs. H., cold storage birds are no more likely to have this smell than those which have not been frozen. Frequently market chickens are killed and held several days before sale, and this same odor will develop. It develops with just the same speed in a cold storage chicken once the bird has been taken out of freezing. If you cannot be sure that your market fowl is freshly killed, it is often more satisfactory to buy a cold storage bird still frozen and thaw it yourself in your refrigerator, draw it at once, and cook it. You will find no unhappy flavor to bother you.

"Should bread flours be aged before using?" asks Miss K. G. Discoveries are being made so fast that it's hard to make any statement as a final fact, but the latest tests by cooks and scientists show that freshly milled flour gives us less desirable loaves than aged flour. Flour on storage becomes slightly acid, and this may have some effect on its baking qualities. Do not make a marathon out of it, though. Five weeks to a few months seems to give the biggest and best loaves. When it is held in storage too long the volume of the loaves seems to slump.

Then about that objectionable soapy or bitter taste in gingerbread. That, Mrs. G. M., is a little reminder that your bread won't need so much soda next time. You will find that your next product will be lighter, because excess soda tends to darken foods containing molasses, but it will also be far better in flavor.

Next, the question from Mrs. N. F. D., who wants to know what to do with mayonnaise which has "broken" or become unemulsified.

This may happen to mayonnaise, by the way, if too much oil has been added, or if it has been frozen, shaken about too much, or dried on the surface. To bring it back to its one time creaminess, you may either add the curdled mass gradually with steady beating to a beaten egg yolk or you may merely add it slowly to a tablespoon of water or vinegar, beating just as you would if you were adding oil to the egg yolk when first making mayonnaise. But don't try to add the yolk or water or vinegar to the curdled mass. It just won't work.

Jumping Jack

Stand erect with the feet together, toes straight ahead, and hands at the sides. On count one raise the hands and clap overhead as you jump the feet apart. On count two, jump back to position, bringing the hands down to the sides.

Get the Habit of Drinking Plenty of Water

Take a Glassful Before You Exercise.

The complete set of Antoinette Donnelly's stretching exercises will be published in booklet form soon, the date to be announced later in THE TRIBUNE.

BY ANTOINETTE DONNELLY.

By the way, I meant to tell you that it is an excellent idea to treat yourself to a good, stiff drink—of WATER—before you begin your exercises. Take the water hot or cold, as you prefer. But take it!

Incidentally, this is an old trick of preventing B. O. Works the poisons out of the system. Follow the exercise period with a shower and you may be anybody's sweetie. Take your bath warm at first, then tepid, then as cold as you can stand, and you'll feel like a million.

And don't do strenuous exercise for two hours after eating or you'll get a pain in the tummy and other sensitive spots, maybe!

I think it time you were having a little real fun with your exercises now. You're limbered up sufficiently to show off a bit, aren't you? To show how much lighter you are on your feet? Probably have a lot less weight for the poor pedal extremities to carry. You're feeling a bit lighter and sensing what a joy it is to recover that old light footed management of your body?

I've talked quite a lot about being a light stepping sister and how this talent makes all the difference in keeping you young looking. Well, here we have something today guaranteed to bring you up on your toes and down again with feathery lightness. I would suggest that the heavy busted women wear a firm brassiere doing this jackknife jump. It's grand for leg reducing, thigh and buttocks. Waist and arms are likewise benefited.

First, stand with the feet together, toes directly forward, hands at sides. On count one, raise the hands overhead with a clap as you jump, the feet fairly wide apart. On count two, jump back to position, bring the hands down to the sides. Make it snappy—one, two; one, two. Do this eight or ten times, gradually increasing.

You can do this one to music. You can gather the youngsters around and make a merry occasion of it. In fact, any time you get a chance to introduce the play element into exercise more value will accrue.

Now Is Time to Buy Things for the Home

Household Linen Displayed in Chicago Shops.

BY RHEA SEEGER.

It's probably the very best time of the year to indulge any concealed weakness for such housewifely things as blankets, pillows, any new ideas for bedding, swanky silk comforts, and all the lovely things to fill your linen shelves.

Certainly it is the time to find values and bargains and brand new colors for towels, sheets, table linens, and even pillows. Most of Chicago's stores are filled with all these domesticated necessities, everything that a particular shopper will appreciate, and all are tagged with extremely interesting prices.

Pillows, for a pastel tinted reason, are enough to make even a bachelor maid stare with surprise . . . nice, new fat squashy pillows now boast about the delicate pastel tints of the outside ticking cover. You can find the most cheerful shades of yellow, blushing pink, plump numbers and some pastel blue tints that are only surpassed by their variety of size.

If by any chance you ignorantly thought bed pillows were a standard shape that never varied, shop around and see the outsized affairs . . . longish ones that ought to satisfy the most luxurious sleepy head, startling big squares that will decorate as well as serve as a head haven for the hard to please pillow puncher, and lastly the extra fat and thick affairs that will stick securely and snugly behind the back of the read-in-bed enthusiast.

All of the best color combinations are available in cozy featherweight wool comforts . . . you can buy them in two, or one color, pale gold faced with leaf green, a soft old rose against old blue, bright yellow with blue, mauve with crimson, or any of these colors used without a contrast.

Some good looking chintz quilts are made of shell pink printed chintz on one side, faced with a light green flowered chintz on the other. The deep scalloped edges are outlined with white and a huge three letter white monogram is planted in the exact center. And all those knockout candle wick bedspreads are hung about in a good variety . . . the most exciting patterns being the modernistic designs of squares, plaids, and chevrons worked out in three contrasting shades of one color.

The most startling things you will see are the new blue towels, the Turkish towels that are as blue as blue Monday, but no doubt will make a grand appearance over any towel rack. The khaki colored bath towels ought to please any masculine soul who avoids anything sissy, even in the towel racket . . . and if the deep khaki shade seems a bit too dark, there are some beige tinted beauties that will absorb as well as decorate.

Some perfectly riotous bath towels of huge proportions are anything but shrinking, in color or size . . . you will almost hear the good yellow towels that are barbarically striped with scarlet, kelly green, and vivid blues, and their colors are as audible after frequent trips to the washtubs as they are now.

Somebody with an unusual sense of either humor, or strained originality, has presented some hand towels of black linen monogrammed in either white or colors . . . just what use in the general scheme of things those sinister appearing towels are for remains to be questioned, but any small dirty fingered male, eternally urged to wash his grimy digits, should probably cheer wildly for such agreeably dark things that will leave no tell tale impressions of unfinished and hurried ablutions.

Ben Lyon Will Fly New Plane to Hollywood

BY GEORGE SHAFFER.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Hollywood, Cal., Jan. 20.—[Special.]—Ben Lyon leaves Sunday for Wayne, Mich., to fly his new plane, a Stinson 4 place closed model, with Lycoming motor, back to Hollywood. Ben bought the new plane because his wife, Bebe Daniels, finds it too chilly riding in his present open model. Lyon hopes to fly back here from Michigan in 20 hours.

Fulton Oursler, magazine editor, who doubles in novel writing and triples as a scenarist, is now moving from Columbia studio to MGM, where they offered him more money.

Joseph M. Schenck, head of the United Artists studio, which is shortly closing down for a couple of months, and also head of the Agua Caliente, Mexico, Jockey club, yesterday issued a statement denying he is giving up his affiliation with the horse racing operations. Mr. Schenck said: "I went into that field during a serious depression, knowing exactly what was to be faced, and am perfectly satisfied with affairs at the track in the face of conditions.

Diana Wynyard celebrated her 25th birthday last Monday night by telephoning her parents in London and her mother spent most of the time in reading approving reviews of the daughter's work in "Cavalcade," which had been cabled from New York to England. "I didn't have the heart to tell her I had already read them myself," the actress said.

Two pictures produced in Europe by Harry Lachman, former Chicago newsboy and newspaper artist, who recently was imported as a film director here, have been bought by two different Hollywood film plants for American release. One is "The Outsider," an English produced, English language film which Lachman directed three years ago. MGM will release it. The other is "La Belle Marinieire," a French produced and French language film which he made in Paris shortly before coming to the United States recently.

Lachman recently completed "Face in the Sky" for Fox here, which has a number of original deviations from ordinary film routine that have caused comment within the industry in advance of its general showing.

Child Suffers When Furniture Is Held Sacred

He's More Important than Sofas, Chairs.

BY GLADYS HUNTINGTON BEVANS.

"Sometimes, mother," said a young son one day, "it seems to me that Billy's mother cares more for her house and her furniture than she does for her children. They can't do anything—hardly."

You can imagine what kind of house Billy's mother's is. It looks like the exhibition room of a decorator or the window of a department store. There isn't a shabby or scratched or used-looking thing in it. Her house is of major importance in the life of Mrs. Brown.

There are many homes like this—where the regard for the interior furnishings is so sacred, so great that the children are only tolerated intruders. Nothing in them bears the marks of living—the imprint of human beings.

You couldn't possibly imagine any one saying of anything in them, "O, don't give that old sofa away—I love it." Or "don't sell that little chair—it seems like part of us. See, here's where the baby bit with his first tooth—and look at the marks of Billy's heels on the rungs."

No. Everything is so carefully watched that the shine on the table is that of its pristine varnish—not the mellow patina of many hands and real use. The furniture in such a home is to me like the man who went to his grave "unwept, unhonored and unsung."

But there is another kind of house for children to live in—to live and love and quarrel and read and work and play in. In this house it is no crime for a sofa to be shabby. How else can you lie on your back on it with your feet cocked up, and read, or stretch and dream, or wrestle and tussel?

In this house it is no crime to whittle, even if when you clean up you overlook a few shavings. In this house it is no unforgiveable sin to cut and fit doll clothes in the living room or to mess around making candy in the clean kitchen, or trail in with a muddy, dripping turtle.

In this house a child is not nagged or scolded for the logical confusion of interested occupations, the wear and tear of good, lusty living. This home belongs to him as much as to his parents.

Here it isn't a case of, "Take your feet right off my new slip cover," when he forgets, but a friendly, "Sit over in the big chair, Bill, where you can put your feet up on the foot stool—we want to keep this cover clean."

This home is for the child—not the child for the home. The mother in this home knows that furniture, like clothing, gains in character and interest with use.

Who, for instance, who loves antiques wants one that looks as if it were new—that bears no marks of its users—that has none of that soft polish made by many hands resting on its arms or on its table top?

We have an old pewter mug that a friend brought to our house from Eton. Don't you think we like it more, that it gains in interest because it is dented and nicked around the base where, long ago, the boys—little ones, too, O shades of modern diet and milk for children—used to pound on the tables for their ale?

Is your house an interior to be admired and for which the children are to be sacrificed? Are your children tolerated intruders in it?

Or is your house a home, a joint possession, a warm place to be used and enjoyed and reasonably respected by the children, as well as by you?

EDISON LIVING A NEW LIFE? 'TALKS' TO HIS ENGINEER

Ex-Aid Tells of Conversing with Late Inventor.

BY EDMOND TAYLOR.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, Jan. 20.—Thomas A. Edison is living a life after death, something he never believed while alive. That tentative conclusion comes from Dr. Miller Reese Hutchinson, who was Edison's close collaborator and for 10 years his chief engineer. Dr. Hutchinson today told how once since the inventor's death he has talked to him through a medium.

Edison, he said, remarked early in the conversation:

"Well, Hutch, I've had to revise my ideas about life after death. I'm on the other side of the river. But I don't know where I'm going from here."

Seeks Better Communication.

Dr. Hutchinson said he then talked with his old laboratory companion about scientific subjects, and that Edison asked him to work on earth toward establishing better means of communication with the "beyond."

Asked why it was necessary to have a medium to communicate with some one on earth, Edison explained that the medium occupied the same rôle in spiritism as the fluorescent screen in the X-ray. Dr. Hutchinson related. Just as the X-ray without the fluorescent screen does not reveal the bone structure of a hand held before it, so the spirit that has passed beyond cannot communicate with those on earth except through a medium, he said.

The seance took place about a year ago when Dr. Hutchinson had been invited to the penthouse apartment of a friend, Peter Duryee. Duryee Hutchinson explained, is not a confirmed spiritist, but is interested in the subject objectively. There were present at the seance the medium, a Miss Tuft, Duryee, and Mrs. Duryee. Doors of the room were locked and the lights turned out.

Plans Verification.

Dr. Hutchinson made it clear that he neither believed nor disbelieved. He simply stated his experiences and told of his plans for verifying or disproving these apparent demonstrations from beyond-the-vale. At other times, he said, he heard the voices of Elmer Sperry, Charley Hyde and other old friends.

While Dr. Hutchinson disclaimed belief or disbelief in the genuineness of his seance with Edison it was plain from his conversation that he at least inclined heavily toward the former conclusion. He told of an amusing experience he had had with fake mediums. Invited to a seance where luminous faces were to appear from "beyond," he took along with him a small syringe filled with a weak solution of silver nitrate. Every time one of the luminous faces appeared near him—the room had been darkened—he gave it a spray of silver nitrate. The seance ended hurriedly, he said, and the two mediums came out of it looking as though their faces had been doused in a silver bath.

Dr. Hutchinson told of many other spiritist seances and had a ready answer for every objection by skeptical listeners. He insisted that he had an open mind and would be ready to believe in spiritism only after checking on many more experiments personally.

Tests Edison's Voice.

"Being a scientist and naturally skeptical," he declared, speaking of the Edison conversation, "I realized I might have been the victim of hypnotism or some other device. So I took from Edison's own laboratory one of his phonograph recording contrivances and kept it at my side during the next seance.

"The moment I heard Edison's voice I switched on the recording apparatus. When the voice stopped I immediately turned on the lights and played the record. It was certainly Edison's voice, just as I had heard it for years when he was living."

Dr. Hutchinson plans on his return to the United States to have another seance in his own penthouse apartment. He has arranged to have the room photographed during the entire seance by means of apparatus using infra-red rays and to have the conversation recorded by the latest talkie equipment. He plans to have every safeguard taken to defeat any attempt at trickery.

TESTIFY FACTOR AID PROMOTED LONDON "DEALS"

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Jan. 20.—Harry Geen, accused of receiving $70,000 with the knowledge that it was unlawfully obtained from the Broad Street Press, frequently dictated letters dealing with stock promoted by the firm's publications, according to testimony brought out at his trial today. Geen, like John (Jake the Barber) Factor of Chicago, fought extradition on charges of alleged bucketshop operations and denies that he knew any irregularities took place.

Stenographers employed by the Broad Street Press, however, testified that Geen dictated letters relating to shares in Asbestos Holdings, Ltd. This was one of the issues which the prosecution charges Broad Street Press induced ignorant speculators to buy on fake promises of rich profits.

John Tucker, a witness, testified that he received copies of "Finance," one of Broad Street's publications, and that later a representative called urging him to buy shares in the company recommended.

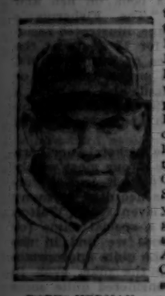
BABE HERMAN SIGNS; GLAD TO BECOME A CUB

Asks to Join First Group in Camp.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Los Angeles, Cal., Jan. 20.—President William L. Veeck of the Cubs today announced the signing of Floyd [Babe] Herman, heavy hitting outfielder, who has been a persistent spring holdout for other clubs in the league, and a deal to take Outfielder George [Tuck] Stainback, 20 year old Los Angeles High school athlete, from the Angels of the Coast league to start the 1934 season.



BABE HERMAN.

Veeck said Stainback will come to the Cubs next year in return for an unannounced cash sum and three players. Pitcher Ed Baecht and Outfielder Marvin Gudat are to be turned over to Los Angeles.

Another Pitcher to Go.

The third player, a pitcher, will be left on the coast at the close of the Cubs' spring practice here. Stainback is on the threshold of his third year in league ball, being a recent graduate of Fairfax High school in Hollywood, where he was better known as a 22 foot broad jumper than a ball player.

He was injured in April, 1932, but came back to bat .356 for the Angels for the season.

Veeck met Herman at the Biltmore at lunchtime today, the first time the Cub president ever had met the outfield star personally, and the contract signing was all finished even before the waiter had brought the first course.

Babe Anxious to Start.

"Herman was so enthusiastic that he asked that we allow him to report with the first Cub squad when it gets here on Feb. 21," Veeck said. "He acted tickled to death; just like a kid."

Herman was still tickled when THE TRIBUNE reached him at his home at Glendale, in the Los Angeles suburbs.

"Sure, I'm pleased," he said. "Why not? It looks to me like a great ball club. I feel as though I am going to have a great year. I'm down to 190 pounds now and playing a lot of golf.

"I ought to be able to hit still better in that Chicago park than in Cincinnati."

Babe beamingly described the contract terms as "very satisfactory to me." Veeck, seen in Los Angeles after the contract signing, said: "It was satisfactory to us, too. You can say this about it: There was no cut in salary for Herman, so why shouldn't he be beaming about it?"

Herman's contract is for the one year of 1933. He has been doing a lot of carpentering and odd job work about his Glendale bungalow during the winter months and interspersed it with plenty of golf. He said today that he expected to report about 190 pounds and gradually work down to 175 for the start of the season.

Still Has That Batting Eye.

"My eye is fine," he said. "Golf helps it. I'm shooting now in the high seventies. I'm getting so good I expect to wing one of those Catalina Island wild goats with a golf ball."

Veeck has one more contract signing job to perform here. He expects to sign Bud Tinning, young pitcher, who resides in Los Angeles, next week. Mr. and Mrs. Veeck, who are here as house guests of the Cubs' official's sister, Mrs. Frank Kaster, expect to make their first 1933 survey of Catalina Island tomorrow.

Veeck was buoyant over the season's prospects. "We know we are going to have a great season," he said. "Everything is lining up right for us."

Pitcher Baecht and Outfielder Gudat will be removed from the Cub roster at once, Veeck said. They will start the practice season with the Angels. Stainback also will start with the Angels. He probably will report to the Cubs near the close of the 1933 playing season, Veeck said.

THE GUMPS—RIGHTO!

TALKING IT OVER

BY ARCH WARD.

ANNOUNCEMENT that Heartley Anderson had been retained as head coach for 1933 ended one of the most unusual periods in the athletic history of Notre Dame.

For the first time since it became nationally prominent in football university officials heard requests from all parts of the country for a new coach.

While Notre Dame is listed among the middle west's football pioneers it did not become prominent until 1913, the year it first whipped the Army, 35 to 13. Jesse Harper coached the team in those days. He carried on with splendid success until business pressure forced him to resign in 1918. Then came Rockne. That era needs no recounting. It is the most brilliant chapter in American football history. Any one with the temerity to suggest that Rockne be fired would have been exiled to Siberia without trial.

Anderson, who was serving as assistant at the time of Rockne's death, was given command in 1931. Notre Dame lost two games that season, but there were no violent demands for the coach's scalp. The first audible rumble of discontent followed the 1932 Pittsburgh game. It grew in volume as the season progressed, despite victories over Navy, Northwestern, and Army. Defeat at Southern California gave the movement for Anderson's dismissal added impetus. You heard that the Notre Dame system, handicapped by new rules, had broken down; that the system was mainly Rockne, anyway.

Reports to the contrary notwithstanding, Anderson came close to being demoted. But not because his teams had lost four games in his two years at the helm.

Why then was a change considered?

Briefly and candidly, the only adverse criticism you can make of Anderson is his inability to talk as entertainingly and forcefully as his illustrious predecessor. It was Hunk's hard luck to follow one of the most brilliant after dinner speakers of his day. The contrast was shocking to outsiders.

University officials would not have had to look far to obtain a successor to Anderson who might have been more representative of the academic side of the institution. They also might easily have chosen a man with more showmanship, which would have helped to maintain their popularity and drawing power.

Their decision to retain the present leader speaks their appreciation of his loyal service and their confidence in his ability as a coach.

Anderson is no Rockne, but the men for whom he works have ruled that he will do until another Rockne comes along.

SANTA BUTTS MALONEY; STOP BOUT IN ROUND 5

Boston, Mass., Jan. 20.—(AP)—Jose Santa, Portuguese heavyweight, scored a five round technical knockout over Jimmy Maloney of Boston, tonight, after they clashed heads in a clinch.

Santa's unintentional butt opened a wide cut over Maloney's eye and Referee Johnny Martin refused to permit him to come out for the fifth round.

Mangrum and Peters Win Golf Meet in Rain

Craig Wood of Deal, N. J., and Bob Goldwater, Phoenix, scored 66 for second place.

New York, Jan. 20.—(AP)—Jimmy Caras outscored Erwin Rudolph in today's two blocks of their 1,750 point pocket billiard match at the Strand, but still was behind 1,250 to 1,119. Caras took the afternoon block, 181 to 125, in eleven innings, flashing a high run of 77, and then piled up 210 points to Rudolph's 125 in 14 innings tonight.

Bozeman Takes Billiard Lead by Beating Hall

BY FRENCH LANE.

The red haired kid from Vallejo, Cal., Jay Bozeman, raced into an undisputed lead for the world's three cushion billard championship at the Wabash avenue recreation rooms last night.

Most of those in the packed amphitheater, who saw him fairly run away from Allen Hall of Chicago and win, 50 to 34 in 43 innings, doubt if he ever will be out of first place.

After his easy yet startling victory last night, Bozeman led the title field of ten with three victories and no defeats. Besides Hall he has beaten Art Thurnblad and Otto Reiselt, both former world's champions. He rests today and possibly tomorrow. He now is the favorite, 4 to 1, to win the championship. At the outset of the tournament he was at 25 to 1.

Bozeman Wins Easily.

Hall never was able to get a lead over Bozeman. They were tied at two each in the fifth inning, but from there until the finish Bozeman maintained an advantage. He made difficult angle shots so easily they did not even appear spectacular. He was on his feet firing away the second Hall stepped away from the table. He did not stop to ponder over the shots and kept up this attack until he clicked off his 50th billiard. Score by innings:

MOON MULLINS—HORSE FEATHERS!

EARLIER CHICAGO.

DEAR WAKE: The old West Virginia building of the World's Fair of 1893 stands at 4117 Wentworth avenue. It was moved to this site after the fair and still is in good physical condition. The words "West Virginia" have been removed from the panel at the top (front), but the panel is still there. —James V. DeVine, a reader since the days of H. E. K.

A large number of private schools catering to the schons of the then aristocracy were located on Chicago's west side in the '80s. Among these may be mentioned the Park institute on Ashland at Madison; Miss Holbrook's school, Jackson near Honore; the Select school, Honore between Adams and Jackson; Miss Kate Beebe's, Ogden avenue near Hermitage; Miss Mary Harkin's, Hermitage near Van Buren; Miss Langstaff's, Washington, corner Robey; Miss Lucretia J. Bigelow's, Hoyne near Monroe; Mrs. M. B. Fletcher's, Washington near Leavitt; Mrs. Belle Campbell's, Lincoln near Washington, and the German American institute on Robey just south of Madison. F. R.

A 'Way Back Whenner recently asked if we remembered when mules pulled Raleigh's old wagon around 18th and Canal in 1871. I certainly do. I and my three brothers drove them delivering groceries around old Bridgeport—the stockyards and Rock Island shops at 51st and Wentworth. What you would call the "gold coast" of those days was Wabash avenue, Indiana, Michigan, and Prairie on the south side, a district near Lincoln park on the north side, and Washington boulevard on the west side, later including Ashland avenue or boulevard.

I am still carrying a souvenir of the old mules. They ran away at Halsted and 37th, and my brother and I both were hurt. I have a scar on my chin and head. Our family doctor at the time was Dr. E. W. Lee, later associated with Dr. John B. Murphy. We had the mules from about 1866 to 1892 or 1893.

Disillusion.

You gave me a wishing ring one night,
A pretty sparkling ring;
You told me to wear it always
And I might have anything.
One day it ceased to glisten
[Magic and love don't last!]
So I gave it to a little boy
As he went skipping past. Eleanor.

"Ye Never Can Tell."

Harve: Dr. John McDonnell, the artist, has a saying I've heard him use for many years: "Sure, ye never can tell what'll happen in a big hotel."

Until recently I never understood the humor or implication. Finally his wife told me that when they were first married they lived in a hotel in Holyoke, Mass. The bell captain was a pompous, self-satisfied old Irishman. One day Dr. McDonnell heard his fellow countryman lecturing the bellhops who were lined up in front of him, like this:

"Now, byes, I went ye all t'keep yer uneforms brushed, yer shoes shined and yer manners on the tip o' yer tongue. That's th'way t' git along. Why whin I came here I was no more importint than wan o'ye. Looket me now—sure, ye never can tell what'll happen in a big hotel."

Chief John Scores First Win of 1933

Miami, Fla., Jan. 20.—[Special.]—Chief John, owned by J. A. Marsch, a starter only four times in 1932, scored for the first time since September, 1931, when he drove to victory by a neck in the Arcadia purse, feature at Hialeah Park today.

Pari-Mutuel, bearing Joseph E. Widener's silks, was second, another neck before Hal Price Headley's Big Beau.

Winner Makes Good Time.

The test was at a mile and Chief John, now a gelding of five by Sir John Johnson from the Reaper, was timed over a fast track in 1:37 2-5. He had up 116 pounds and was the second choice in the betting, paying $5.60 for $2 to his backers.

With good attendance and close racing, the afternoon was nevertheless a disappointment to form players as all seven favorites lost.

Lady Legs Is Disqualified.

The first disqualification of the meeting also took place in the Santa Rosa purse, secondary feature, wherein Lady Legs was set back after she had finished third. The race was won by E. R. Bradley's Algeria, which finished a head before Zorana.

Lady Legs and Pernickety finished neck and neck in the order named, half a length back of Zorana. The latter was moved up to third when Lady Legs was disqualified. All of the placed horses were long shots, Algeria returning $26.90 in the mutuels.

Michigan Coaches Opposed to Game with Notre Dame

Ann Arbor, Mich., Jan. 20.—[Special.]—The University of Michigan will not meet Notre Dame on the football field at any time within the next few years despite reports that a series of games between the two universities is being considered.

This was made clear today after the Michigan coaching staff had spent more than two hours discussing schedule possibilities of the future. The coaches agreed that if the Wolverines add any games with central western teams outside of the Western conference the University of Detroit should receive the first consideration.

At present the Michigan schedule is made up of six conference games, a game with Michigan State and one with an eastern team, Cornell being on the 1933 schedule. The agreement with Cornell is for only one game, however, and some other eastern university probably will replace it next year. Harvard is being considered.

HITLER FORCES REICHSTAG TO DELAY OPENING

Seeks to Heal Wounds in His Party First.

BY SIGRID SCHULTZ.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, Jan. 20.—The reichstag council of elders today postponed the next meeting of the reichstag until Jan. 31 instead of Jan. 24 as originally scheduled. Adolf Hitler's National Socialists forced the delay in order to gain time to make it possible for their leader to reconcile the conflicting movements within his party.

Chancellor Kurt von Schleicher made it known that he agreed to a short postponement of the reichstag, but that he objects to any further delay since he demands a showdown on whether or not the reichstag will cooperate with him.

Nazis to Invade Red Area.

The cabinet spent this afternoon discussing the measures to be taken on Sunday when Hitler has ordered a great demonstration of storm troops, guards and youths in front of the Karl Liebknecht house in the heart of Berlin's communist district.

This Hitlerite incursion into Red territory has aroused the fury of Berlin labor. Communists have ordered their followers to stage a counter-demonstration which the police have prohibited. Communist leaders this afternoon called on representatives of foreign newspapers in Berlin "to tell the world we protest an open provocation of the working masses and will not be responsible for anything which may happen on Sunday."

Police Take Threats Calmly.

Police officials are taking the threats calmly, declaring they are fully able to protect the demonstrating Hitlerites even in the heart of the communist district. Republicans are urging the government to prohibit the Hitlerite demonstration "to insure peace."

Storm Troop Leader Slain.

WARNS AMERICA TO SAVE BEFORE RAISING TAXES

Factory Association Chief Cites U. S. Deficit.

East St. Louis, Ill., Jan. 20.—[Special.]—Robert L. Lund, president of the National Association of Manufacturers tonight criticized government waste as "appalling." He asserted that until every possible means of reducing the cost of government has been exhausted no form of additional taxation should be considered. He spoke before a meeting of the southern division of the Illinois Manufacturers' association.

With total receipts of approximately 2 billion 100 million dollars for 1932 the federal government spent last year five billion dollars. The 1932 deficit was 2 billion 900 million dollars, an increase of almost two billion dollars over 1931, Mr. Lund pointed out.

Income Tax Cut in Half.

Considering the years 1930-'31-'32 Mr. Lund said that revenue from income taxes decreased 56 per cent, which, he said, "is convincing proof of the fallacy of making those taxes the major source of revenue."

Pointing to the deficit of 624 million dollars for the first four months of the fiscal year 1932-'33, starting the first of last July, Mr. Lund said: "In those four months we spent twice our income and are confronted with the amazing fact that a balanced budget would have required a 100 per cent increase in tax receipts, and this under the burdensome tax law passed by congress at the last session."

Mr. Lund pointed out two major opportunities for economy in the national budget. A saving of at least 400 million dollars should be made in expenditures of the veterans' bureau, he said, by elimination of nonservice disability benefits. He cited the department of agriculture as another government bureau which should be severely restricted.

Less U. S. in Business.

He also asserted that elimination of governmental competition with private business would remove a tremendous drain on resources.

A committee composed of 90 representatives of national and state industrial associations has been appointed by the National Association of Manufacturers for the purpose of recommending specific instances where savings in federal government costs can be effected, he said.

Indianapolis Power and Light.

Please inform me as to the rating of Indianapolis Power and Light preferred. Thank you for this and past favors.—Mrs. M. S.

Indianapolis Power and Light company is controlled by Utilities Power and Light corporation. It furnishes electricity to Indianapolis and 51 other neighboring communities.

Operating revenues for the 12 months to June 30, 1932, were $9,509,000 and net income, before depreciation and federal taxes, was $2,714,000. This was after charges, which, as specified in the indenture securing the company's bonds, provide for reserves of 5 per cent of gross for maintenance and 5 per cent for renewals, less amounts actually expended for such purposes. For the preceding 12 months operating revenues were $10,145,000 and net income on the same basis was $3,427,000.

Operating revenues for 1931 were $9,902,000, against $10,270,000 for 1930, $10,328,000 for 1929, and $9,336,000 for 1928. Net income, after all charges, for 1931 was $2,467,000, or $17.32 per preferred share, against $2,802,000, or $23.25 per preferred share, for 1930. Net for 1929 was $3,093,000, against $3,532,000 for 1928.

On Dec. 31, 1931, current assets were $4,080,000 and current liabilities were $1,372,000. Cash was $1,989,000. Amounts due from affiliated companies [not current] totaled $2,103,000 and amounts due to affiliated companies totaled $171,000.

Funded debt totals $22,217,000. There are outstanding 120,000 shares of 6½ per cent and 22,400 shares of 6 per cent cumulative preferred, both with a par value of $100. Both series have equal preference.

The preferred deserves a fairly good rating.

Pennsylvania Telephone.

Please give me your opinion of Pennsylvania Telephone corporation 5s, due 1960.—Miss S. A.

Pennsylvania Telephone corporation, a subsidiary of Associated Telephone Utilities company, furnishes telephone service to Erie, Johnstown, and 320 other Pennsylvania communities. It operates 31 exchanges with 58,043 stations, of which 40 per cent are automatic.

Telephone operating revenues for the first 11 months of 1932 were $2,069,000, against $2,288,000 for the corresponding 1931 period. Operating revenues for the full 1931 year were $2,497,000, against $2,568,000 for 1930. Fixed charges were earned 4.31 times in 1931 and 9.68 times in 1930. Results of previous years are not strictly comparable, because of the rapid growth that has since taken place.

On Dec. 31, 1931, current assets were $297,000 and current liabilities were $189,000.

SATURDAY, JANUARY 21, 1933.

M'CHESNEY FEES IN RECEIVERSHIP TOTAL $97,500

1400 Lake Shore Dr. Tangle Is Bared.

Nathan William MacChesney, an attorney well known in political and social circles, holds three different jobs in connection with the receivership of the 1400 Lake Shore drive apartment hotel, and to date has rendered bills, totaling $97,500 for his services in the three capacities, it was learned yesterday.

N. W. MACCHESNEY.

Disclosure of the situation in this particular receivership came on the eve of the publication today by the Chicago Bar association of a recommended schedule of fees for lawyers in receivership matters.

Typical of Many Cases.

It brought from an attorney who furnished part of the information the comment that the MacChesney case is typical of a large number of similar ones which moved the Bar association to attempt a partial check, at least, on some members of the bar who have received large fees from distressed properties.

In another receivership case, a suit filed yesterday in the Superior court charges officials of the Greenebaum Sons Investment company, the Central Trust company and the Shoreland hotel with a conspiracy to defraud bondholders of the hotel. It was charged that the debt of the hotel, originally bonded for $4,800,000, has been increased to $6,352,280.

Others Share in Fees.

While Attorney MacChesney has obtained the largest single slice of fees out of the 1400 Lake Shore Drive receivership, others have shared in the distribution. The total fees for receiver, attorneys, members of the bondholders' committee and others engaged in the attempt to reorganize the building have already amounted to $295,500.

This is exclusive of any of the expense of actual management of the building since it went into receivership on Dec. 4, 1930. The defaulted first mortgage bonds on the building, now outstanding, total $3,724,000. The record of the case, obtained partly from court files and partly from confidential sources, indicates that the bondholders, who normally would be considered after a default as holding the first claim on the property, have been pushed aside, while the committees supposed to represent them and receivers, managers and attorneys have battled for a share of the income of the property.

The largest of MacChesney's fees comes to him as attorney for the Chicago Title and Trust company, complainant in the pending foreclosure proceedings. His fee of $75,000 in this connection has been approved in court.

Chairman of Committee.

MacChesney appears elsewhere in the picture, however, and each appearance is accompanied by a bill for another fee. He is chairman of a bondholders' "protective" committee, and as such made a charge of $7,500. Four other members of that committee, Frank Whiting, David S. Davis, Kenneth Dick, and J. M. Bowlby, have each submitted a bill for $6,000 for their services.

The bondholders' committee also had to have an attorney, and as chairman MacChesney got the job for himself at a third fee of $15,000. His services as attorney for the Title and Trust company apparently did not permit him to give to bondholders all of the legal assistance they required, however.

Charles E. McGuire, imitating MacChesney in multiple appearances, is on the committee pay roll for $5,000 as secretary and for an additional $7,500 for legal services. There is also an item of $6,000 entered in the records of the case for "secretary's office," without details as to location, purpose or occupant.

Consul General for Siam.

MacChesney, among other things, is consul general for Siam, trustee of Northwestern university and of the Public Health institute, and possessor of a biography in "Who's Who in America" longer than that of President Hoover, who recently appointed him minister to Canada, in which appointment the senate has yet to concur.

Court records show that MacChesney already has collected $28,000 on his $75,000 fee, but the size of his charge has aroused protests, both from bondholders and from the members of the "protective" committee which he heads himself.

To justify his fees, MacChesney ushered before Circuit Judge Joseph Burke three other lawyers as expert witnesses to the value of his services. The three lawyers, Rush C. Butler and Frederick A. Brown, both former presidents of the State Bar association, and Granville W. Browning, for many years a master in chancery, approved the $75,000 fee, and Judge Burke allowed it. The company to which an application for a loan was made for reorganization purposes did not appraise MacChesney's worth so highly, however.

Recommends $50,000 or Less.

That concern, the Fort Dearborn Mortgage company, refused to make the loan unless MacChesney's fee was slashed to $50,000 or less.

Others than MacChesney, however, have drawn large fees from the receivership. The receiver, Chester Davis of the Chicago Title and Trust company, got $30,000 for eighteen months' work. In addition to this the actual

Pros and Cons of Domestic Allotment Plan

This is the second of two articles dealing with the domestic allotment farm relief plan. This article summarizes the principal arguments of both proponents and opponents of the plan.

BY SCRUTATOR.

In essence, the domestic allotment plan proposes to raise the income of agriculturalists by a twofold operation, reduction of production of wheat, cotton, hogs, and tobacco [and perhaps some other products] and a bonus derived from an excise tax levied on processors of such commodities.

Farmers who reduce their acreage by 20 per cent or cut hog production by the percentage would receive the bonus, pro rata, after the government's expenses in operating the plan were subtracted from the tax. Processors of farm commodities, the flour millers, cotton textile operators, meat packers, and tobacco manufacturers, would be expected to retrieve the excise taxes by charging higher prices to consumers.

Friends Deny Its Cost.

Proponents of the plan maintain that it is not a raid on the public treasury, such as the farm marketing act proved to be, because the excise taxes will defray both payments to farmers and government expenses. They argue that it will remedy over-production and bring output close to domestic needs, as only producers who conformed to government regulations would receive the bonus and it would be derived only from home consumed products. They say that this process would automatically raise prices and that the excise taxes would be lowered to the extent that the spread between prices of farm and nonfarm products moved toward a pre-war parity.

On the other hand, opponents of the domestic allotment plan present many strong objections. On the economic side, they point out that the agriculturalist is a large consumer of his own products. He would be allowed to process $250 worth of his crops for his own use and, estimating there are 6,000,000 farmers, this would mean that products to a value of 1½ billion dollars might bear no tax.

Output Is Variable.

It also is pointed out that a vast difficulty would be encountered in imposing a 20 per cent reduction in production. Even if a fair reduction in acreage could be obtained, the output per acre is highly variable. Wheat and cotton growers might reduce acreage and yet not reduce production comparably if they practiced more intensive cultivation. This would be legitimate practice and encouraged by higher prices.

Another vital economic objection is the toll that would be laid on consumers, which has been estimated from 700 million to 1 billion dollars a year. While the farm income dropped 6½ billion dollars a year between 1929 and 1932, it is pointed out that the drop in income of the nonfarm population is indicated by the census bureau's estimate that factory output dropped from nearly 70½ billions in 1929 to around 41 1-3 billions in 1931. Moreover, a further considerable decline took place last year.

Other Objections.

Some critics of the plan declare it would obligate the federal government to pay each farmer a bonus on all he raised on his allotted acreage, while there is no obligation on the part of processors to buy all products raised. Therefore, the government would have to defray any difference.

Finally, the objection is raised that a vast federal bureaucracy and an army of inspectors would be built up. It would be necessary to supervise five million farms and 9,000 processors, they insist, and even then such supervision could not take in thousands of retail butchers and small millers nor farm processed commodities.

"Enforcement and supervision will require no less than 50,000 men," one critic says. "To be effective it will require a degree of bureaucratic tyranny which will make the darkest pages of prohibition enforcement seem tolerant."

"If it were not for taxes and foreclosures the average farmer would not be worrying as much over this depression as his brother in the towns and cities," another critic says. "Yet it is the latter group, with a decline of billions in production and billions in wages, that is to pay the toll."

Bank's Deposits $9,992,354; Owes R. F. C. 8 Million

Knoxville, Tenn., Jan. 20.—[Special.]—An official of the East Tennessee National bank stated today that the institution, which was closed "for the protection of depositors," owes the Reconstruction Finance corporation around $8,000,000. The statement of the bank as of Dec. 31, 1932, showed total deposits of $9,992,354.

Congress Will Start Work on Inflation Today

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 20.—The house banking and currency committee today gave voice to the demands of congressional inflationists with the announcement that it will take up the Steagall currency expansion bill tomorrow, with a view to getting action on it at this session.

At the same time, however, the powerful ways and means committee took action which was interpreted as indicative of anti-inflationary sentiment, when its membership voted to retain jurisdiction over the Busby inflation bill recently introduced.

Committees Quarrel.

The banking and currency committee, chairmaned by Rep. Henry B. Steagall [Dem., Ala.], and including among its members several of the leading advocates of expansion in the house, is generally regarded as leaning markedly toward immediate enactment of inflationary legislation. For several days, it is understood, the banking committee has been clamoring for jurisdiction over the Busby bill, which represents the proposals of the so-called inflationist bloc in the lower body. Refusal by the ways and means committee to surrender jurisdiction over that measure was regarded as indicating that committee's disapproval of inflation.

Coming within a few hours of one another, the actions by the banking and ways and means committee, were looked upon as evidence that a new rift in the ranks of the Democratic leadership may develop over currency expansion legislation. Majority Leader Henry T. Rainey, Democrat of Illinois, and several other more conservative members of the majority party have frowned thus far on most of the schemes proposed by such rabid inflationists as Rep. Wright Patman [Dem., Tex.], Rep. John E. Rankin [Dem., Miss.], and Rep. Busby. Mr. Rainey recently stated that remonetization of silver was as far toward inflation as he would like to go.

Provisions of Measure.

The Steagall bill, which the banking and currency committee is to consider tomorrow, provide for the issuance of one billion dollars of new currency backed by long term government bonds. It provides also for the purchase by the government of 250 millions of silver bullion which would be used as the basis for an issue of federal notes in that amount, and for the monthly purchase, after that, of silver bullion amounting to one-twelfth of the annual output of the United States, Alaska, and the Philippines.

"In effect," said Mr. Steagall, "the measure provides that the United States shall hereafter use as money our entire domestic production of silver. The purpose of the legislation is to secure at once a conservative expansion that should be of material benefit in restoring commodity prices."

BANK OF ENGLAND SILENT ON BUYING BACK U. S. GOLD

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Jan. 20.—Official quarters in Great Britain are mute over reports cabled from America that the Bank of England is buying back the gold used for the Dec. 15 war debt installment. The bank's weekly returns have not shown any influx since the payment was made and financial circles are inclined to credit any transactions to the government's exchange equalization fund, established to prevent fluctuations of sterling.

The stock of gold in the bank is slightly more than $600,000,000, about the same as a month ago.

DURANT WINS SUIT ON HIS STOCK SOLD WITHOUT NOTICE

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Trenton, N. J., Jan. 20.—Circuit Court Judge R. V. Lawrence today filed with the Supreme court here a decision holding that William C. Durant of Deal, automobile manufacturer, is entitled to recovery in part of losses suffered in the stock market.

W. C. DURANT. [Campbell Photo.]

Durant filed suit against Benjamin Block & Co., New York brokers. The action was tried at Freehold last June. The plaintiff alleged he suffered losses aggregating $370,000 through his brokers selling his holdings without notice and without authority. Testimony at the trial disclosed that the brokers made futile efforts to get in touch with Durant for more than a week, when the crash came. Then his margins having dropped almost to the vanishing point, they started selling his holdings on Oct. 11, 1930.

The next day Durant got in touch with the brokers and endeavored to put up more collateral to cover his margins, but the collateral not being sufficient, the brokers resumed selling his holdings on Oct. 14. Durant said Block had agreed not to sell his stock without orders from him and he demanded that they pay the losses.

In his decision Judge Lawrence holds that Durant is entitled to recover any losses suffered through sales made on Oct. 11, but not on sales made Oct. 14 and thereafter.

Street Railways Will Spend $50,000,000 in 3 Months

The Associated Business Papers' Review of trade trend says street railways are starting maintenance and replacement purchases that should reach $50,000,000 in this quarter and four times that amount for the whole year, partly due to the show.

10,000 Retail Buyers Coming for Convention

About 10,000 retail store buyers from all parts of this country and Canada are expected to attend the twenty-third annual convention of the Interstate Merchants' council, which will be held here from Feb. 6 to 8 under the auspices of the Chicago Association of Commerce, according to Paul Kunning of the commerce association.

About 85 companies dealing in wearing apparel and accessories and 500 wholesalers and manufacturers will participate in the convention, which will be a spring showing similar to the autumn show held last August.

Hold Historical Style Show.

One of the main features will be a style show to be held at the Sherman hotel which will have for one of its major attractions an exhibit showing the evolution of women's styles in the last 100 years. On Feb. 7 there will be held "metropolitan night," to which all the big stores in the Chicago district will send buyers.

Mr. Kunning estimates that each of the stores represented will send three of its agents: First, a dry goods buyer, second, an apparel buyer, and third, a specialties buyer.

Along with the major showings, which will be held in the Merchandise Mart and in the various establishments of the general wholesale district, there will be two gift shows, one in the Merchandise Mart and one at the Palmer House; a curtain and drapery exhibit at the Palmer House, and a second style show at the Morrison hotel.

Special Rail Rates.

Special railroad rates will be given by the roads to members of the Interstate Merchants' council, which are expected to help increase the attendance. The fares will be one and a half the regular rate for the round trip.

The mercantile affairs division of the Illinois Chamber of Commerce is cooperating.

Mr. Kunning states that the autumn showing last August was highly successful. He said the business upturn of the fall in the Chicago district was partly due to the show.

STOCKS MOVE UP $1 TO $2 A SHARE ON 'GOOD NEWS'

Day's Grist Brings Quiet Buying.

BY FRED HARVEY.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Jan. 20.—Prices moved ahead 1 to 2 points in quiet trading on the stock exchange today. News of the decision reached at the Hoover-Roosevelt conference to reopen war debt discussions with Great Britain, improvement in bond and wheat prices and—probably most important of all—the stout resistance stocks have been offering to "bear" selling of late were the chief motivating factors of the recovery movement.

There was some disappointment that the market did not make a more spirited response than it did to the statement on the debt agreement. Observers pointed out, however, that congress has the final say on any arrangement that may be reached for a settlement and with so many other uncertainties on the intervening calendar the market is becoming more and more cautious over such "good news" nowadays.

Business Checks Markets.

The continued backwardness of business is tending to restrain enthusiasm from whatever cause, it would seem. The week-end trade reviews today had little to tell of improvement in any line or quarter and with spring just around the corner, traders were quick to note the fact. Growing evidences of liquidation in some of the leaders had a discouraging influence and no doubt kept the market from showing as much appreciation as it might have otherwise, of the more favorable items of the day.

Today selling of this nature converged in Consolidated Gas and Chrysler. Earlier in the week it was National Dairy Products and a little later, Macy and Woolworth shares that were being unloaded. The switching about makes the selling look to some like distribution.

Expect New Financing.

As for Consolidated, the selling in that big league utility favorite is attributed to concern over financing plans which the company is reported to have under discussion. Of details, however, the street has heard nothing beyond reported preparations to refund one or two of the outstanding high coupon issues or the corporation proper or its subsidiaries. The stock sold down about 2 points from its early high today but rebounded toward the last close unchanged from its last night's final. Chrysler also made up its early loss after dipping to a new low for the year.

Prospects of a good showing in the weekly carloadings figures due tomorrow was a sustaining influence for the carrier shares. Union Pacific rose 2½ points and Lackawanna and Delaware and Hudson a point or so each, but the improvement for the rest of the group was chiefly fractional.

Oils were held in check by the unsettled price structure of the industry. The amusements were likewise sluggish and idled about their previous closing prices.

Tobacco shares continued to bid for leadership honors with Liggett & Myers issues showing the way.

Turnover was around 700,000 shares.

New Utility Group Plans to End 'Insullism'

BY HOWARD WOOD.

The new Edison Electric institute is the result of the electric utility industry's decision to purge itself of "Insullism," according to W. J. Hagenah, vice president of the Byllesby Engineering and Management corporation.

Mr. Hagenah was vice president of the now defunct National Electric Power association and he now occupies a similar position with the Edison Electric institute, which last week arose phoenixlike out of the ashes of the N. E. L. A.

"Leaders in the industry," Mr. Hagenah says, "make no attempt to deny the abuses that have existed in the electric utility business.

Growth Brought Errors.

"The electric power and light business in 47 years has grown from a million dollar experiment to a 12 billion dollar industry. It was inevitable that this tremendous growth should have been accompanied by mistakes and misfortunes.

"All that is past. It is with the future that we are now concerned. We are going to wipe the slate clean."

The new Edison Electric institute, Mr. Hagenah said, is built upon the idea that the electric industry can achieve the greatest good for the public as a whole and best further the ends of the companies by laying all the cards on the table.

"We go on the theory that a properly managed utility company has nothing to fear from the people," he said. "Laws are not passed to make good people out of those who are already good. This is the greatest step any industry has ever taken toward taking the public into its confidence."

Must Make Reports.

Mr. Hagenah called attention to the constitution of the new organization, which provides that member companies shall make available to the public complete financial reports at intervals of not more than one year and that these statements must be certified to by certified public accountants who have no connection with the companies they examine.

As evidence that the Edison Electric institute seeks to avoid propaganda activities he pointed to the provision in the constitution which stipulates that "all information designed for public dissemination and all reports to governmental authorities shall be accurate and clearly indicate their source."

BLACKSTONE'S RECEIVER PAYS '29 AND '30 TAXES

Delinquent taxes of $133,056 for 1929 and 1930 were paid yesterday to the county treasurer's office by the receiver for the Blackstone hotel. The assessments for 1929 were $57,472 and for 1930, $72,584. To these were added penalties of approximately $3,000.

The payment was made following the action of Judge Jarecki of the County court in overruling tax objections. Representing the hotel were Edwin L. Brashears, the receiver, and Nathaniel Rubinkam, attorney for the Metropolitan Life Insurance company, which holds a mortgage of approximately $1,616,000 on the hotel.

Federal Judge James H. Wilkerson will give a decision today on the foreclosure sale on the furnishings of the Blackstone. Agents of the Metropolitan company said yesterday that they would put up a certified check for $160,000 by Monday when the bid of Albert Pick & Co. expires. The insurance company has taken over the real estate and building on its mortgage. The Continental Illinois National bank holds a chattel mortgage for $275,000 on the furnishings.

CHICAGO BANKS WEIGH NEW CUT IN INTEREST PAID

N. Y. Slashes to ½% on Time Deposits.

BY THOMAS FURLONG.

Resistance of the big member banks to the easy money pressure applied by the federal reserve authorities appeared in the open yesterday when the New York clearing house voted to cut the interest rate on demand deposits to the historic low figure of ¼ of 1 per cent. The rate on time deposits was cut from 1 to ½ per cent for deposits of not less than 90 days.

It was learned last night that the Chicago banks are considering a similar reduction. It is understood that a majority of the Chicago clearing house committee is in favor of the cut, and it is expected that formal announcement of the reduction will be made today.

Result of Reserve Pressure.

The action was seen as the answer of the big commercial banks to the insistent pressure of the federal reserve board to force them to adopt more liberal loaning policies. Instead of expanding their commercial loans the banks are reducing the interest rates on the demand balances of corporations and other big depositors.

Under the ruling of the New York clearing house anything less than 90 day deposits will be considered demand deposits and will draw interest at the rate of ¼ of 1 per cent, against ½ of 1 per cent heretofore. Previously the thirty day deposits were entitled to the time deposit rate of 1 per cent. The rate on the deposits made by the mutual savings banks with commercial banks also was cut to ½ per cent from 1 per cent. The new schedule is effective Jan. 25.

Chicago's Plan for Cut.

The Chicago banks will not follow New York in changing the definition of demand deposits to include all deposits up to 90 days. The present classification of 30 days balances as demand deposits will be retained and the rate will be reduced to conform with the New York rate of ¼ per cent, it is understood. The same reduction in time deposits is expected to be made.

The reserve board's fixed easy money policy has forced the member banks to choose between two courses. They may make more liberal commercial loans to get a higher interest rate than they are now getting on commercial paper and government securities. The other course open is to continue operation on the present slim profit margin. The latter course means paring interest rates on deposits. Yesterday's action indicates that the banks have no intention of abandoning the latter policy to which they have adhered for months.

The latest reduction emphasizes the present abnormally low level of all types of interest.

Interest Rates 1.39%.

The average rate on prime commercial paper in December was 1.39 per cent, as compared with an average return of 2.58 per cent for the full year of 1931. The same average rate of 2.58 per cent prevailed in 1931.

The average renewal rate on call loans in the New York market was 1 per cent in November and December.

The average yield to banks on their holdings of government securities is now between 1 and 1¼ per cent.

Buenos Aires, May	.37½	.38⅝

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

Several new influences were added yesterday to the vast number that must be considered by wheat traders, trying to decipher the trend of the market. Talk of inflation in currency in Canada, a reduction of nearly 2,000,000 acres in wheat in the Punjab district in India, combined with strength in stocks caused an early advance of ⅝c in prices to 48⅛c for May and July, a new high for the week. The bullish enthusiasm vanished later, however, when Winnipeg weakened.

Commission houses were on the buying side of wheat early. There also was short covering, but on the upturn houses with southwestern connections turned seller, presumably with Kansas City. There also was pressure by holders of offers. Exporters were on the selling side at Winnipeg on the bulge. That market dropped sharply toward the last carrying Chicago with it. Net losses in the local market were ⅛@¼c with May 47⅝@47½c; July, 47½c, and September, 48⅜c.

Exchange Favors Winnipeg.

Rapid changes in foreign exchange rates tend to complicate trading in wheat. Winnipeg prices on the blackboard showed net losses of ⅝@1c for the day, but on a gold basis the May was off only ¼c per bu due to a higher exchange rate. London quoted 78⅜ at $3.35 in American money, while in Canadian funds the rate was $3.84. The Australian pound was quoted at $2.68. However, the wide spread in the exchange rates appears to have little effect on Liverpool. The latter closed ¾c per bu lower, figured on the American sterling rate.

Some operators see in the heavy oriental demand for wheat the prospect of a rapid disappearance in the so-called excessive world's supply.

Further emphasis was given to this view by the official report placing the acreage in the Punjab district of India at 9,172,000 acres against 10,756,000 acres last season. The condition was given as 90 against 95 last year.

No rain was reported over the dry sections of the winter wheat belt, and unfavorable crop comments are increasing. Export sales of Manitobas were placed at 400,000 bu. Buenos Aires weakened late in the day and closed ⅞@1¼c lower.

Argentine Corn Damaged.

Argentine cable to Bartlett, Frazier & Co. claiming heavy damage to corn in the province of Cordoba, as much as 50 per cent in some sections, started a buying movement in the local market yesterday which carried May up ⅞c to 27¼c, with shorts covering on the way up. On the bulge some of the early buyers turned sellers and with the easier tone in wheat corn reacted quickly. Closing trades were unchanged to ⅛c higher with May, 26⅛c; July, 28c, and September, 29¼c.

Oats firmed with corn early, but reacted and closed unchanged. May was 17¼c and July 17⅝c at the last. Rye was little affected by wheat failing to rally with that grain early, and closed ½@⅝c lower with May at 35c and July, 34½c. Barley gained ½c with May at 27½c at the close.

LIGHTER HOGS RISE 10 TO 15C AS RECEIPTS DROP

Reflect a Better Demand for Pork Products.

Smaller hog receipts, slightly colder weather, and an increase in eastern buying orders contributed to the advance yesterday. Light weights gained 10@15c more, with pigs and underweights up 15@25c.

Big weights mostly were 10c higher for the day. Heavy packing sows showed an inclination to drag on a steady to 5c higher price basis. Top hogs equaled the highest point since Nov. 28 at $3.50. The general average price moved up 10c to $3.30, 50c above the winter's low. Until yesterday shipping demand had been light practically all week. Evidently small supplies have helped to right the sluggish wholesale pork trade at eastern distributing centers. Yesterday's receipts at Chicago at 18,000 were second smallest for Friday since Nov. 4, 40 per cent under the average Friday's run of the last three weeks. Eleven leading markets so far this month show a decrease of about a half million hogs compared with the same period in 1932 and are smallest for January since 1911.

Cattle Supply Also Lower.

Yesterday's scant supply of cattle, totaling about 1,000 head, met an unsatisfactory and weak to 25c lower market. Despite the meager receipts trading dragged longer into the afternoon session than usual for Friday. Before the finish, however, there was a fair cleanup. Some extremely heavy beef steers sank to new low levels, below the $4.00 line.

A load of 1,339 lb averages brought $4.00 and a shipment of 1,405 lb steers reached $4.60 during the forenoon. Good quality yearling cattle averaging 994 lbs topped the market at $6.00. Weight rather than quality seemed to be the determining factor in the butcher stock trade again. Fat she stock exceeding 1,000 lbs in weight were a drug on the market at new low price levels for the season. Nothing strictly choice in the light weight class arrived. Bulls were dull. Calves sold steady.

Heavy Lambs Decline.

Light and handyweight slaughter lambs held steady again yesterday, selling at $6.00@6.25 to all interests in the trade. Medium and weighty stock slumped 25@50c. An increase in the proportion weighing above 95 lbs put that particular class on the "spot." Prime 96 lb averages, mates to the $6.25 kinds Thursday, cashed at $5.75 yesterday.

Good 102@112 lb averages were discounted to $5.50. This was the hardest punishment heavy lambs have had this season. Lambs without fleece sold at $5.25. Yearlings brought $5.00, two year old wethers, $4.00 and old ewes $2.90, the latter being the highest sale in several weeks.

LARD PRICES HAVE SMALL NET LOSSES AT DAY'S CLOSE

Trade in lard was small and the undertone easy. Packers were best sellers of January and more deferred months, with the buying limited. Prices had a small range and closed unchanged to 2½c net lower. Trading was largely in January and May. Cash trade in large was moderate with regular tierce $3.97½, while loose lard was $3.47½, a discount of 60c, making a liberal allowance for the packers in tiercing product. Leaf lard was $3.37½. Export clearances were 2,843,701 lbs and of bacon 115,000 lbs. There was no trading in bellies for future delivery and the market was nominally 2½c lower, cash lots were unchanged at $3.87½. Prices follow:
